PEDALED IN VAIN ... Zinno couldn't get 'The Olympian' up.

Pedal-Power Flyer Foiled

NORTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — The propeller turned, but slowly. You could see each revolution. And the plane went down the runway, also slowly. A man could run alongside.

Joseph A. Zinno pedaled frantically, trying to get his muscle-powered airplane off the ground. Four times he tried. Four times he failed.

But, undaunted, he says he will be back — as soon as he can tinker a bit and maybe get a push.

It was a scene out of another day, on another beach, when two brothers named Wright, then in their 30s, made their dreams fly in another airplane in Kitty Hawk, N.C.

On Thursday it was Zinno, 52, of North Providence, R.I., struggling slowly down a cracked asphalt runway on a former naval air base beside Narragansett Bay.

Zinno wants to go the Wrights one better by flying an airplane with only a man's power — no engine. Several Europeans have done it, but so far no American.

Zinno tried once at 6 a.m., a second time soon after. A third try just after 8 a.m. ended halfway down the runway. A fourth try took him 50 yards farther. Each time he stayed earthbound on the asphalt.

Zinno gave up for the day and said he would return his light-weight plane, made from balsa wood and aluminum, to a hangar at the former Quonset Point

Naval Air Station and make some minor adjustments.

But he will try again another day.

"The only thing keeping me from lifting off is acceleration," Zinno told reporters. "If I can't push it, I'll find someone else who will."

"The airplane wants to go," he said. "I'm definitely sure of that."

Zinno, who has spent four years and $5,000 on the aircraft, wants to fly it on a day like Thursday — clear skies and calm winds — so he can keep it under control.

"I can't bring it out at high winds," he says. "Then I would really fly, but I don't want to fly it that way over the bay. I want to be in it."

Zinno, a former Air Force lieutenant colonel who once flew C141 cargo planes, said his aircraft weighs 150 pounds empty and is designed to weigh 290 pounds with a pilot. Its wing span is 78 feet.

"I've got 8,000 hours of transport time but this is totally new," Zinno said. "I have to learn how to fly it."

Zinno said he hopes to get the plane at least 10 feet off the ground and eventually put it through a figure-eight turn.

That would be going the Europeans one better as well as the Wright brothers. Even the Europeans who have achieved man-powered flight haven't done a figure-eight.

He said he hopes to make his next attempt Tuesday.

CIA Director Reveals 'Secret Mission'

Washington (UPI) — CIA Director George Bush revealed Thursday he has been on a recent secret mission to three foreign countries on a fact-finding tour and was encouraged by what he found.

Speaking without notes at a luncheon of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Bush mentioned the matter during an address defending the CIA and underlining the necessity for intelligence to maintain American democracy.

Bush, talking to reporters after his speech, declined to identify the countries he visited or when he visited them.

"I said it was secret and that's what that means," he said.

Bush was believed to have gone to Western Europe, but CIA officials with him said they could not say where he had been or when he had gone. Bush volunteered the information in his impromptu address to the ASNE editors, to the apparent discomfiture of at least one intelligence aide with him.

Bush was talking about the morale of the CIA community following almost two years of congressional and press disclosures of the foreign and domestic abuses with which the agency has been charged.

"It is a fantastic reservoir of discipline in the CIA," he said. "Our personnel people say that the quantity of applications is up. This is an expression of confidence in the agency... morale is A-one..."

"I've just come back from a secret mission to three countries."

Bush said he was encouraged by what he found.

In other points and in answer to questions, Bush:

— Said the CIA will never release the names of American reporters who were on its payroll or collaborated with the agency: "We will not disclose the names of people who in good faith volunteered information."

Asked specifically, in the interest of the integrity of the press, to give the names of some 36 to 75 American journalists who allegedly were on the CIA payroll or contributed information to the agency, Bush said: "I am not going to release the names. I understand your concern. But I'm simply not going to do it."

Asked if the CIA still has relations with U.S. reporters, Bush said, "I cannot comment forever on what we are doing."

— Had no comment on an article by former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird in the May issue of Readers Digest, about the CIA thwarting assassination plots against three American "political leaders," frustrating missile attacks against planes at Rome's international airport and unearthing Soviet-made explosives allegedly used against Jewish officials in New York City.

The CIA chief was asked about an off-the-record briefing the agency gave recently to science reporters, one of whom reported that it was divulged that Israel has a stock of some dozen atomic bombs.

"I took the responsibility for that," he said, adding those who divulged the information had been reprimanded. But he refused to say whether the reprimand led to disciplinary action, including court action against those who gave secrets.

Bush said it was absurd to suggest his former post as chairman of the Republican National Committee had any connection with the CIA post. He said his previous posts as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and head of the U.S. liaison in Peking was good background for CIA chief.

He said President Ford proposed a number of regulatory intelligence boards to make sure the CIA did not stray from its task. The administration, he said, also encouraged formation of a joint congressional committee to oversee the whole intelligence community.

Expert Can't Identify Blood On Coat Found At Peery's

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

An FBI expert testified Thursday that human bloodstains were found on a tan raincoat which police discovered in Wesley Peery's apartment.

Robert E. Beams, from Bethesda, Md., said, however, there wasn't enough blood present in the stain to determine what blood type the stain was.

Earlier Beams, who is an expert in analyzing bloodstains, said Peery has Type A blood, as does about 40% of the population. Examination of the blood from a part of a pants outfit worn by Mrs. Marianne Mitzner showed she had Type B blood, Beams said.

Beams was called as a prosecution witness as prosecutors attempted to prove Peery killed Mrs. Mitzner on June 6.

Shot In Head

Peery, 51, is charged with first degree murder and robbery. Mrs. Mitzner was found bound, gagged and shot three times in the head in the bathroom of the Mitzner Rare Coin Shop, 6106 Havelock Ave. Coins and watches valued at $20,000 were taken from the shop, police said.

County Atty. Ron Lahmers also called another FBI expert to testify on the composition of various pieces of white cord, rose-colored rags and debris from a pocket knife.

Harold Deadman, who conducted his examination of evidence at the FBI lab in Washington, D.C., said he found white cotton fibers in the debris scraped from a pocket knife. The knife apparently was removed from Peery after he was taken to the police station.

Characteristics Same

Deadman said the fibers exhibited the same characteristics as other pieces of cord he tested.

He described the rope as being "a very flexible, nonstiff kind of cordage."

However, under cross examination by defense attorneys, Deadman admitted those fibers are "a very common fiber."

When asked by the defense if a cotton string would have similar fibers, Deadman said it could have.

Deadman also testified that pieces of rose-colored cloth appeared to be cut from the same source.

Photos Show Rag

Lincoln Police Lt. Marvin Morgan testified that he took the pictures at the murder scene which showed a rag around the throat of Mrs. Mitzner.

In previous testimony Wednesday, an apparent discrepancy surfaced concerning the ownership of some quarters found in the apartment which Peery shared with Mary Blazek.

Police Detective Jerry Thomas said that Peery told him on June 26 that both he and Mrs. Blazek had stored the quarters in a tool box. The box was stored in a closet at Peery's apartment on N. 48th St. However, when Mrs. Blazek testified Tuesday, she said the money wasn't hers and she didn't know the box was in the closet.

Deadman said the fibers exhibited the same characteristics as other pieces of cord he tested.

Grocery Stores Defended By Ag Director Kreuscher

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

Sanitation in Lincoln grocery stores is reported to be "near excellent" by the State Bureau of Dairies and Foods, according to State Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher.

Kreuscher was responding to a report released by the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department Tuesday which stated that just the opposite was true.

He said that while individual problems are recurrent in inspections, "no wholesale discredit is deserved as indicated by the recent health department report."

Kreuscher said that he had read a copy of the Tuesday report and found it "void of proper documentation to justify the remarks made by the individual inspectors."

"I think that the stores and the consumers should be aware that the health department has been interested in licensing check-out counters in a plan that would raise considerable revenue for the city," he added.

Ford Signs Flu Shot Program Bill

Washington (UPI) — President Ford Thursday signed a $135 million bill aimed at having all Americans inoculated against swine influenza by year's end.

"I urge every American to receive an inoculation against this form of influenza," Ford said in a statement.

The President, signing the bill that establishes and finances the inoculation program, told he called the health department inspection a "duplication of services" which will cause an eventual rise in costs to the consumer.

Noting that the Bureau of Dairies and Foods has "strict enforcement" at its disposal, he criticized the health department for "not reporting its findings to the proper authorities."

"Since the charges were not reported, or justified, it appears that the city officials are more interested in sensational headlines than providing an effective assessment of the grocery store problems," Kreuscher said.

In the area of food handling, Nebraska is the only Midwest state to pass a federal survey during the past four years, he said. Two federally certified inspectors are full-time staffers in the Nebraska department, he added.

In light of the "enviable sanitation record" of the Lincoln stores, Kreuscher offered "congratulations to the many food retailers who made this possible."

reporters a similar flu killed 500,000 Americans and some 20 million persons around the world at the end of World War I.

"We will mobilize all necessary national resources to make sure we reach our goal" of total U.S. inoculation, he said.

Two sponsors of the bill, Democratic Reps. Daniel Flood of Pennsylvania and Paul Rogers of Florida, joined Health, Education and Welfare Secretary David Mathews at the signing ceremony and got a presidential handshake of thanks.

The President, often a critic of congressional action, said Wednesday's passage of the bill before the start of the lawmakers' Easter holiday showed they can act with speed.

Auctioneers Grumble, NETV Cancels Show

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

A film on Nebraska auctions, produced at a cost of $12,600, will not be aired by the Nebraska Educational Television Network because the auctioneers did not like it.

Program Manager Ron Hull said the film was produced on a grant from the National Auctioneering Association.

Hull said after viewing the film, the 12-member panel of the association said, "We won't pay if you broadcast it."

Hull said the primary purpose of the film was to make copies of auctioneers to show at civic clubs for promotional purposes, as a secondary purpose, Hull said, the film was originally to be aired for Nebraska viewers.

When asked if private groups should have control over the content of public television programs, Hull said, "They didn't have any control over it."

"However, later in a second telephone interview, Hull said he wished the auc-tioneers would have had more input.

"You can't produce a program to please 12 people," Hull said.

Hull said he could not say specifically what the auctioneers did not like, but said Nebraska auctions were not representative of all auctions. "It was too narrow in scope," he said.

He said the network had made other films for private groups which were not intended to be aired on the network.

Asked if the activity fell within the commission's statutory charter, Hull said the University of Nebraska responds to the needs of the state in different ways.

The charter says the commission is empowered "to receive gifts and contributions from public and private sources to be expended in providing educational television facilities and programs."

Hull repeatedly asked who told the Associated Press about the film, at one point saying, "I don't want anybody to get hurt."

Christians, Moslems Shatter Cease-Fire; Arafat Offers Plan

Beirut Lebanon (UPI) — Christians and Moslems slammed rockets and mortars at each other Thursday shattering the 10-day-old cease fire. Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat sped to Damascus with a four-point Moslem peace plan.

Daylong renewed fighting killed 74 persons in the past 24 hours and wounded 150 others to keep the average death toll during the supposed cease-fire at 50 per day. Nearly 17,000 persons have died and 45,000 have been wounded in the war that began a year ago.

Right wing Christian forces backed by armored cars attacked and drove leftist gunmen from the Mt. Lebanon town of Dhour Choueir 15 miles east of Beirut. The incident sparked a heavy artillery and mortar barrage from Moslem areas against Christian suburbs which in turn drew answering fire.

About 14 rounds of 120-mm rocket fire crashed on the Barbur

Hospital on the Moslem side of the "green line" which separates the western Moslem sector from the Christian suburbs in the east. A hospital spokesman said the barrage caused only material damage with no casualties among the 200 patients and staff.

Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization arrived in Damascus Thursday night and immediately began talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad. Damascus Radio said Arafat, the radio said, was accompanied by a number of other PLO leaders.

The Syrian-Palestinian talks, the radio said, were also attended by Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam, air force commander, Gen. Naji Jamil, and chief of staff, Gen. Hikmat Chehab.

Palestinian sources said the Arafat visit was part of the current efforts aimed at smoothing relations between the Syrian government and Lebanese leftists — ruptured by the incursion of Syrian troops into Lebanon.

The Syrians, who moved 6,000 troops about three miles inside Lebanon to enforce an arms blockade against the Moslem leftist strongholds, showed no sign of advancing from their positions despite the renewed fighting.

Political sources said Arafat would deliver a four-point proposal from the leftist alliance to Syrian President Assad, and a demand from Socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt for Syrian troops to withdraw.

The plan calls for:

—The revival of the joint Palestinian-Syrian-Lebanese military committee to police the cease-fire.

—A round table conference to restore peace — with Jumblatt

possibly requesting the talks be held in Paris.

—Dropping the constitutional document Assad worked out with Lebanese President Suleiman Franjeh.

—Leaving the election of a new president to the Lebanese.

The Christian right-wing phalangist party radio accused Iraq and Libya of sending men and arms to fight on the side of the leftists. It said the men and munitions were traveling via Cyprus by ship to the ancient port of Sidon in south Lebanon.

The leftists counter-charged that the Syrian blockade was preventing foodstuffs from reaching Lebanon.

Jumblatt said trucks bringing flour from Kuwait and Iraq had been stopped at the Syrian border and a ship which docked in the Syrian port of Latakia, with foodstuffs for Lebanon was prevented from unloading.

U.S. To Exchange Arms For Bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States agreed Thursday to give Greece $700 million in arms aid over four years in exchange for the use of Greek military bases.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Greek Foreign Minister Dimitri Botsios initialed a statement of principles setting out guidelines for upcoming final negotiations.

These talks will begin immediately and should be completed in four to six weeks, State Department officials said.

The accord is parallel to an earlier agreement reached with Turkey under which the Ankara government will receive $1 billion over four years in exchange for reopening 26 Turkish bases for American use.

The arrangement with Greece modifies earlier agreements starting in 1955. The primary difference under the new agreement will be that each installation will be considered under Greek control with increased participation by the Athens government, the Greeks will also get a larger share of the information obtained in intelligence gathering from the facilities.

U.S. officials acknowledged that the arrangement with Greece is in response to earlier opposition by Greek supporters in Congress to the Turkish agreement.

Those critics had charged that Turkey should not receive aid as long as there is no settlement of the Greek-Turk conflict over Cyprus. In addition, criticism was leveled on grounds that the military aid to Turkey would destroy the military balance in the Eastern Mediterranean.

American officials said they hoped that the two agreements would increase American influence in both Greece and Turkey and therefore would lead to improved chances for a Cyprus settlement.

However, the leaders of the pro-Greek forces in Congress have indicated they will oppose the Turkish arrangement anyway.

even if it means defeat of the accord with Greece.

For instance, Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., told reporters that "I think it wiser if we have neither deal."

Brademas said "Turkey remains in violation of U.S. laws." This was a reference to charges that Turkey used American arms when it invaded Cyprus in 1974 during a renewal of the civil war on that island.

Brademas also argued that no aid should be given to Turkey until concrete steps are taken to resolve the Cypriot dispute.

Many members will vote against both agreements, he said, because they call for authorizing the aid over a four-year period rather than annually.

The agreement initiated Thursday makes no direct reference to Cyprus. However, an exchange of letters concerning the island between Kissinger and Botsios was released by the State Department.

27 Million Taxpayers Raced Clock

Washington (UPI) — About 27 million taxpayers raced Thursday's midnight deadline for income tax filing — cursing the IRS sweating over 1040 Forms flooding the mails and finding cold comfort in the lofty words of Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., who said

Taxes are the price we pay for a civilized society.

That was easy to say in 1904, when there was no federal income tax. But this year, IRS spokesmen said they were expecting about 86 million Americans to cough up about $130.8 billion in revenues by midnight Thursday or without valid excuse, pay a penalty.

The IRS said Thursday it had not yet heard from 31% of the taxpayers about 27 million people. That compared with only 24% on deadline day last year, when taxpayers had the tax rebate incentive to file early.

The government laid on about 21,000 extra helpers to process last minute submissions.

Postal officials expected chaos and said they were ready for it with countless thousands of employees working overtime and even running curbside mail-drop operations amid traffic jams at major postal centers.

Israel May Have To Reassess Buy

Tel Aviv Israel (UPI) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Thursday Israel will reassess its policy of buying American arms if its request for $550 million in extra U.S. aid is turned down.

Rabin said in an interview on armed forces radio that Israel could not afford to drop its demand for the extra foreign aid because the funds were vital for its defense.

Israel is campaigning for the funds in Congress despite President Ford's threat to veto the entire $6 billion foreign aid bill if it includes extra funds for Israel, Syria and Egypt.

"We may be turned down and then we shall have to reassess all the problems of our military purchases in the United States," Rabin said.

Rabin did not elaborate and diplomatic sources said they had no idea what he meant by the remark.

Rabin also said Israel viewed the increased Syrian military involvement in the Lebanese conflict with "extreme gravity."

"If the Syrians overstep certain lines that we set for them, we shall have to take further decisions," he said.

Third Of British Sextuplets Dies; Others 'Delicate'

Newcastle - Upon - Tyne, England (UPI) — The third of the sextuplets born to a Durham school teacher's wife died Wednesday by Cesarean section. Two of the girls had difficulty breathing and died within a few hours. One of the baby boys died Thursday evening.

The babies, three boys and three girls, were delivered two months prematurely, Wednesday by Cesarean section. Two of the girls had difficulty breathing and died within a few hours. One of the baby boys died Thursday evening.

The three survivors, two boys and a girl, were being nursed in an oxygen tent a hospital spokesman said, and all three were still "in a very delicate state of health."

The three have been baptized but have not yet been given names.

The condition of the mother, Christine Price, 30, was improved, the spokesman said. She had been transferred from the intensive care unit to a maternity ward.

Mrs. Price and her husband Alan, 32, have no other children.

Christians, Moslems Shatter Cease-Fire; Arafat Offers Plan

Beirut, Lebanon (UPI) — Christians and Moslems slammed rockets and mortars at each other Thursday, shattering the 10-day-old cease-fire. Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat sped to Damascus with a four-point Moslem peace plan.

Daylong renewed fighting killed 74 persons in the past 24 hours and wounded 150 others to keep the average death toll during the supposed cease-fire at 50 per day. Nearly 17,000 persons have died and 35,000 have been wounded in the war that began a year ago.

Right-wing Christian forces, backed by armored cars, attacked and drove leftist gunmen from the Mt. Lebanon town of Dhour Choueir, 15 miles east of Beirut. The incident sparked a heavy artillery and mortar barrage from Moslem areas against Christian suburbs which, in turn, drew answering fire.

About 14 rounds of 120-mm rocket fire crashed on the Barbir

Hospital on the Moslem side of the "green line" which separates the western Moslem sector from the Christian suburbs in the east. A hospital spokesman said the barrage caused only material damage with no casualties among the 200 patients and staff.

Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, arrived in Damascus Thursday night and immediately began talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad, Damascus Radio said.

Arafat, the radio said, was accompanied by a number of other PLO leaders.

The Syrian-Palestinian talks, the radio said, were also attended by Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam, air force commander, Gen. Naji Jamil, and chief of staff, Gen. Hikmat Chehab.

Palestinian sources said the Arafat visit was part of the current efforts aimed at smoothing relations between the Syrian government and Lebanese leftists — ruptured by the incursion of Syrian troops into Lebanon.

The Syrians, who moved 6,000 troops about three miles inside Lebanon to enforce an arms blockade against the Moslem leftist strongholds, showed no sign of advancing from their positions despite the renewed fighting.

Political sources said Arafat would deliver a four-point proposal from the leftist alliance to Syrian President Assad, and a demand from Socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt for Syrian troops to withdraw.

The plan calls for:

—The revival of the joint Palestinian-Syrian-Lebanese military committee to police the cease-fire.

—A round-table conference to restore peace — with Jumblatt

possibly requesting the talks be held in Paris.

—Dropping the constitutional document Assad worked out with Lebanese President Suleiman Franjeh.

—Leaving the election of a new president to the Lebanese.

The Christian right-wing phalangist party radio accused Iraq and Libya of sending men and arms to fight on the side of the leftists. It said the men and munitions were traveling via Cyprus by ship to the ancient port of Sidon in south Lebanon.

The leftists counter-charged that the Syrian blockade was preventing foodstuffs from reaching Lebanon.

Jumblatt said trucks bringing flour from Kuwait and Iraq had been stopped at the Syrian border and a ship which docked in the Syrian port of Latakia, with foodstuffs for Lebanon, was prevented from unloading.

U.S. To Exchange Arms For Bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States agreed Thursday to give Greece $700 million in arms aid over four years in exchange for the use of Greek military bases.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Greek Foreign Minister Dimitri Bitsios initiated a statement of principles setting out guidelines for upcoming final negotiations.

These talks will begin immediately and should be completed in four to six weeks, State Department officials said.

The accord is parallel to an earlier agreement reached with Turkey under which the Ankara government will receive $1 billion over four years in exchange for reopening 26 Turkish bases for American use.

The arrangement with Greece modifies earlier agreements starting in 1963. The primary difference under the new agreement will be that each installation will be considered under Greek control with increased participation by the Athens government; the Greeks will also get a larger share of the information obtained in intelligence gathering from the facilities.

U.S. officials acknowledged that the arrangement with Greece is in response to earlier opposition by Greek supporters in Congress to the Turkish agreement.

Those critics had charged that Turkey should not receive aid as long as there is no settlement of the Greek-Turk conflict over Cyprus. In addition, criticism was leveled on grounds that the military aid to Turkey would destroy the military balance in the Eastern Mediterranean.

American officials said they hoped that the two agreements would increase American influence in both Greece and Turkey and therefore would lead to improved chances for a Cyprus settlement.

However, the leaders of the pro-Greek forces in Congress have indicated they will oppose the Turkish arrangement anyway, even if it means defeat of the accord with Greece.

For instance, Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., told reporters that "I think it wiser if we have neither deal."

Brademas said: "Turkey remains in violation of U.S. laws." This was a reference to charges that Turkey used American arms when it invaded Cyprus in 1974 during a renewal of the civil war on that island.

Brademas also argued that no aid should be given to Turkey until concrete steps are taken to resolve the Cypriot dispute.

Many members will vote against both agreements, he said, because they call for authorizing the aid over a four-year period rather than annually.

The agreement initiated Thursday makes no direct reference to Cyprus. However, an exchange of letters concerning the island between Kissinger and Bitsios was released by the State Department.

27 Million Taxpayers Raced Clock

Washington (UPI) — About 27 million taxpayers raced Thursday's midnight deadline for income tax filing — cursing the IRS, sweating over 1040 Forms, flooding the mails and finding cold comfort in the lofty words of Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., who said:

"Taxes are the price we pay for a civilized society."

That was easy to say in 1904, when there was no federal income tax. But this year, IRS spokesmen said they were expecting about 86 million Americans to cough up about $130.8 billion in revenues by midnight Thursday or, without valid excuse, pay a penalty.

The IRS said Thursday it had not yet heard from 31% of the taxpayers, about 27 million people. That compared with only 24% on deadline day last year, when taxpayers had the tax rebate incentive to file early.

The government laid on about 21,000 extra helpers to process last-minute submissions.

Postal officials expected chaos and said they were ready for it, with countless thousands of employees working overtime and even running curbside mail-drop operations amid traffic jams at major postal centers.

Israel May Have To Reassess Buy

Tel Aviv, Israel (UPI) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Thursday Israel will "reassess" its policy of buying American arms if its request for $550 million in extra U.S. aid is turned down.

Rabin said in an interview on armed forces radio that Israel could not afford to drop its demand for the extra foreign aid because the funds were vital for its defense.

Rabin also said Israel viewed the increased Syrian military involvement in the Lebanese conflict with "extreme gravity."

"If the Syrians overstep certain lines that we set for them, we shall have to take further decisions," he said.

Sinatra Offered To Gather Info

BOSTON (AP) — Frank Sinatra has offered to do some quiet information-gathering in royal circles around the world for the Central Intelligence Agency, the Boston Globe said Thursday.

According to the Globe, Sinatra put his proposal to CIA Director George Bush at a hush-hush meeting a month ago in the New York apartment of Bush's stockbroker brother Jonathan.

Sinatra, contacted in Hollywood, had only this to say about the Globe's story: "I also offered to be the heir of Howard Hughes, but he evidently turned me down."

The singer refused to elaborate.

When asked about the Globe report, George Bush said, "I don't discuss matters of this nature and I have no plans to get into that. I prefer not to go any further."

But the newspaper quoted Bush's brother as saying, "Sinatra said he was always flying around the world, and meeting with people like the Shah of Iran and the royal family of Great Britain."

"He emphasized time and again that his services were available and that he wanted to do his part for the country," the stockbroker said.

He called it a "very sincere and generous offer" and said Sinatra spoke with great feeling about his family, his love of children and the United States, and his childhood in Hoboken, N.J.

The meeting was arranged by television producer Paul W. Keyes, the newspaper said, who knew George Bush from state dinners in the Nixon administration.

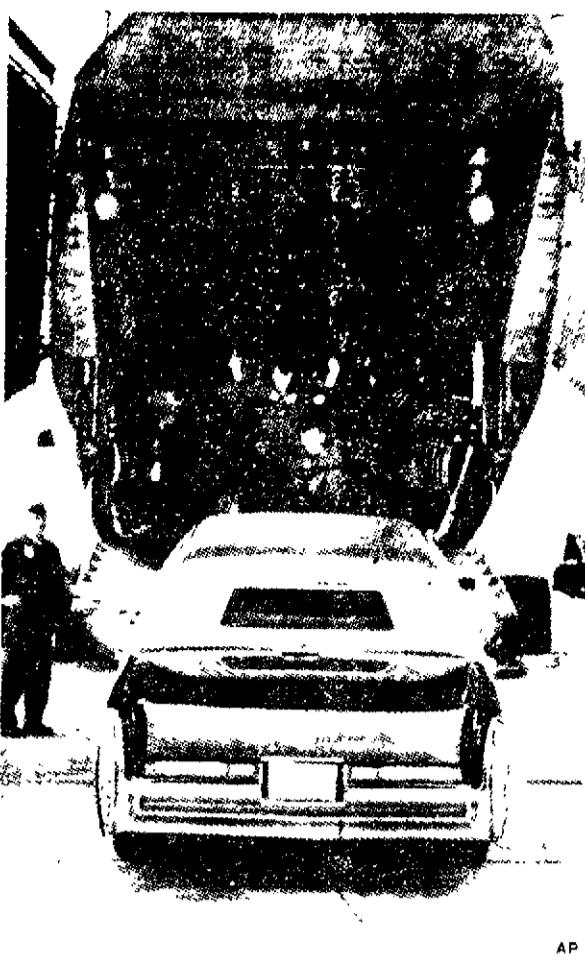

Keyes agreed Sinatra may have offered to help the CIA but said there was no "pitch" made. "It was just old times and exchanges of pleasantries," he said.

The CIA director made no commitment to accept Sinatra's offer, according to his brother.

"We felt like applauding after Sinatra left," the Globe quoted Jonathan Bush as saying. "We had a big laugh about it and then we all got smashed."

He told the paper the first he knew of the meeting was a telephone call from his brother about an hour and a half beforehand.

"Are you ready for some guests, including Frank Sinatra, in your apartment at 6:30 p.m.?" he quoted the CIA head as saying.

'Rich Man, Poor Man' Series Given 23 Emmy Nominations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Rich Man, Poor Man," the 12-hour drama that could revolutionize television programming, swept the Emmy nominations Thursday with 23, including a record 13 for acting.

The serialization of Irwin Shaw's best-selling novel, filmed by Universal Studios for an estimated $6 million, scored nominations for its stars, Nick Nolte, Peter Strauss, and Susan Blakey. Also nominated were Edward Asner for a leading role in the first two-hour segment, and supporting players Robert Reed, Ray Milland, Bill Bixby, Norman Fell, Van Johnson, Dorothy McGuire, Kim Darby, Fionnuala Flanagan, and Kay Lenz.

"Rich Man, Poor Man" not only helped ABC climb to the lead in the ratings, it also sent network executives hunting for other novels to dramatize in miniseries.

"M-A-S-H" with 11 nominations and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" with 10 were the winners among the weekly series. But their victories were tarnished by a foulup in the Television Academy's voting procedure that eliminated several of the top-rated shows and their stars.

"All in the Family," always a much-nominated series, failed to receive a single nomination for acting. The name of Emmy winner Robert Blake ("Baretta") was left off the preliminary list of contenders. Such oversights were "a public relations disaster," an Academy official has said.

"Eleanor and Franklin," the two-part ABC documentary drama on the marriage of the Roosevelts, scored second in the grand totals with 16 nominations, including those for its stars Jane Alexander and Edward Herrman.

Public Television's "The Adams Chronicles" won 11 nominations, including George Grizzard as America's second president.

The Emmys for nighttime programming will be handed out at the Shubert Theater in Century City on Monday, May 17. ABC will telecast the daytime awards this year, while CBS will show the daytime awards on May 11.

A staggering total of 342 nominations were announced Thursday, including outstanding achievement in lighting direction. Among the major nominations:

Comedy series: "All in the Family," "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "M-A-S-H," "Welcome Back, Kotter," "Barney Miller."

Dramatic series: "Baretta," "Police Story," "Columbo," "The Streets of San Francisco."

Comedy series lead: actor Jack Albertson, "Chico and the Man;" Hal Linden, "Barney Miller;" Alan Alda, "M-A-S-H;" Henry Winkler, "Happy Days."

Comedy series lead actress: Beatrice Arthur, "Maude;" Valerie Harper, "Rhoda;" Lee Grant, "Fay;" Mary Tyler Moore, "The Mary Tyler Moore Show;" Cloris Leachman, "Phyllis."

Dramatic series lead actor: Peter Falk, "Columbo;" Karl Malden, "The Streets of San Francisco;" James Garner, "The Rockford Files."

Dramatic series lead actress: Anne Meara, "Kate McShane" and Brenda Vaccaro, "Sara" (both shows canceled). Angie Dickinson, "Police Woman;" Michael Learned, "The Waltons."

'Rich Man, Poor Man' Series Given 23 Emmy Nominations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Rich Man, Poor Man," the 12-hour drama that could revolutionize television programming, swept the Emmy nominations Thursday with 23, including a record 13 for acting.

The serialization of Irwin Shaw's best-selling novel, filmed by Universal Studios for an estimated $6 million, scored nominations for its stars, Nick Nolte, Peter Strauss, and Susan Blakely. Also nominated were Edward Asner for a leading role in the first two-hour segment, and supporting players Robert Reed, Ray Milland, Bill Bixby, Norman Fell, Van Johnson, Dorothy McGuire, Kim Darby, Fionnuala Flanagan, and Kay Lenz.

"Rich Man, Poor Man" not only helped ABC climb to the lead in the ratings, it also sent network executives hunting for other novels to dramatize in miniseries.

"M-A-S-H" with 11 nominations and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" with 10 were the winners among the weekly series. But their victories were tarnished by a foulup in the Television Academy's voting procedure that eliminated several of the top-rated shows and their stars.

"All in the Family," always a much-nominated series, failed to receive a single nomination for acting. The name of Emmy winner Robert Blake ("Baretta") was left off the preliminary list of contenders. Such oversights were "a public relations disaster," an Academy official has said.

"Eleanor and Franklin," the two-part ABC documentary-drama on the marriage of the Roosevelts, scored second in the grand totals with

Retail Ads Earn Most

New York (UPI) — Retail advertising was first bringing in newspaper advertising revenue during last year's fourth quarter, according to the Newspaper Advertising Bureau. Revenues from retail ads were at a $5.3 billion annual rate during the period, a gain of 11.4% from the final quarter of 1974. Classified ads, second, rose 10.5% to a $2.6 billion annual rate.

India Names China Ambassador

New Delhi, India (UPI) — India Thursday appointed a ranking diplomat as its first ambassador to China since the 1962 border war and said it expected Peking to send an ambassador to New Delhi in return.

The announcement of the appointment of K. R. Narayanan, 56, as India's envoy came shortly before Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's visit to the Soviet Union, expected some time in June.

Indian officials said talks with Chinese representatives in New Delhi and Peking began three months ago, around the time of Chinese Premier Chou en-Lai's death, and before the political turmoil that has since rocked China.

There was no immediate comment from Chinese officials in New Delhi on whether an ambassador would be sent here.

No

was there any immediate comment from Soviet officials on the olive branch extended to Moscow's most bitter foe by Mrs. Gandhi. The Soviet Union has traditionally been a staunch ally of India, and the government-controlled, censored press here has often attacked China in much the same terms used in Moscow.

India and China withdrew their ambassadors shortly before the 32-day border war of 1962, in which Chinese troops invaded a disputed area of northeast India, routed Indian soldiers and declared a unilateral cease-fire.

Although there have been indications of a possible thaw in recent years — neither side broke relations and both kept charges in the other's capital — India charged last October that Chinese soldiers killed four Indian troops along the northern border.

Some Indian sources said the exchange of ambassadors would improve India's standing among nonaligned nations, whose leaders will hold a summit meeting in neighboring Sri Lanka this August.

"It wouldn't do for India to go to the summit at odds with her three neighbors (China, Bangladesh and Pakistan) and claim leadership of the non-aligned bloc," one source said.

Foreign Minister Y. B. Chavan announced the appointment in parliament.

Pity Patty And The Rest Of Us

The exploitation of the Patty Hearst case by the media has become shameless. At one time the press, radio and television could be accused only of being overeager in bringing the nation reports of all aspects of the juicy Hearst story — an event made for the media if there ever was one.

But the media can now be rightly accused of its old failing — trying to make chicken pie out of chicken droppings. Nothing is now too unnewsworthy for the media to try to package and sell as honest hard news.

The lead story of the hour during part of the past 36-hour period was Patty's tracheotomy for a collapsed lung. Nothing in the world was more important than that, apparently, according to the radio.

At least one morning television newscast showed Patty's x-rays. The tube leading into the lung can be clearly seen, the 'news' man told his audience. Next, viewers and newspaper readers probably will be seeing charts of Patty's temperature, menstrual cycle and blood pressure. And maybe an hour-long special during prime time about her metabolic rate.

Along with media exploitation of the Hearst family tragedy has already come the commercialization of Patty most notably exemplified in the Steven Weed book and F Lee Bailey's brainwashing defense.

Sure to come, if they haven't already, will be crass reproductions of Patty paraphernalia. The Queen of the SLA will take her place alongside the hapless Kennedys as the star attractions of celebrity pulp magazines.

But those pulp magazines won't have done anything worse than what the straight media has done.

Justice must be served, but alas, what a rotten prospect facing the public. We must still read, see and hear accounts of her sentencing, possible future plea-bargaining, deals with prosecutors in the Harris case, the Soliah case, the Scott case, other possible bank robberies, bombings and acts of terrorism and intrigue beyond counting, her going to jail, if ever, her applying for parole, the parole hearings, her getting out and readjusting, accounts of her bouts with colds and the flu during imprisonment.

A whole generation will be polluted with Patty news.

It makes one wish she had been granted a full and absolute pardon, like Nixon.

Many would like to forget this long national nightmare, too.

Pet Control Change Welcome

The Lincoln City Council's apparent intention to create a new division of animal control within the City-County Health Department is a welcome step. And that is not meant as a rap at the Humane Society, the private organization which has attempted under hopeless conditions to take care of dog-catching duties for the city.

Although some city council members would have the public believe the Humane Society is responsible for the lack of effective animal control and that the Society is being punished by having the city assume control over some of its functions that is not an accurate picture of what has happened.

The board of directors of the Humane Society also favors the transfer of certain animal control functions to other agencies.

The problem has not been unwillingness on the part of the Humane Society to provide the kind of animal control many people in Lincoln desire, rather, the problem has been a lack of funds, personnel and legal authority needed to exercise such control.

Personality differences have also played a part in the ongoing deliberations over animal control.

With the city assuming pickup and enforcement duties within an animal control division having adequate full-time staff and contracting with the Humane Society for boarding or disposing functions, the job of keeping the pet population in line should be done more effectively.

Hua's On Second

WASHINGTON — I have a vested interest in Hua Kuo-feng. It was in this space that Hua's name first saw the light of Western print. Making a list of fearless forecasts for 1976 I came to the question of the successor to Chou En-lai; everybody was saying Teng Hsiao-ping has it in the bag but there were those who looked at his picture on the cover of Time Magazine and said to themselves: Funny, he doesn't look like a prime minister.

By iconoclastic reckoning, the next "Number Two" man to Mao had to be a new face, a Chinese Jimmy Carter, somebody of the generation younger than Mao who was clearly Mao's choice, not a selection of Chou But who? Or, as the Pekingologists say, Hu?

I turned to a Times Washington bureau colleague Joseph Lelyveld an experienced China-watcher for the name of some dark horse with a good outside chance on a muddy track. Without hesitation he chose Hua then head of internal security I named Hua in my prediction list to general snickering from friends at State and CIA and now — just look at him. As solidly ensconced as CHICAGO — A well-known southern black leader was on network TV, expressing his outrage at Jimmy Carter.

He rejected Carter's apology and explanation that the "ethnic purity" statement had been nothing more than a poor choice of words.

As far as this man was concerned, the words were proof of Carter's racial insensitivity and unworthiness for high office.

Not only that, he suspected that Carter might have even used the offensive words deliberately for political gain. The black leader explained:

"He must be after the Polack vote."

I almost dropped my coffee cup. Had I heard him correctly? Was this leader in the fight against bigotry actually referring to persons of Polish ancestry by the offensive term "Polack"? On network TV yet?

I was reaching for my telephone to register a complaint with the appropriate federal agencies, and maybe get all funds for education, medical care, housing, agriculture, and meteorology cut off to his state, when something occurred to me.

Maybe I was acting too hastily. Maybe the man didn't know better. Or if he did, maybe it was just a slip of the tongue.

Either explanation is possible. Remember, he is from the South, where there aren't a lot of Polish-Americans, so he might not know that they consider it an insult to be called a "Polack".

It might even be that he jumps together all persons of European ancestry — Poles, Italians, Bohemians, Germans, Lithuanians, etc. — as "Polacks." Some blacks do. We may all look alike to them.

If this is the case, I really can't get mad at the man. I can just hope that somebody will explain to him that he used an insulting

The Black Calls The Polish 'Polack'

BUT SOMETIMES IT STICKS TO THE ROOF OF YOUR MOUTH

that emotionally he thinks of Poles as "Polacks," beady-eyed, mean, blue collar thugs. But intellectually he knows this isn't true.

And so sometimes he has to struggle to keep his emotional side from overcoming his rational self. But now and then something emotional like the words "Polack vote" comes popping out.

I can understand this. We're all shaped by the influence of others, from the time we are infants.

So I decided against leading a boycott or calling a press conference and condemning the man as a black Archie Bunker, or demanding his removal from his position of leadership.

I'm confident that he really didn't mean it. My confidence is based on the fact that he has an established record for decency, brotherhood, fairness and all that stuff. Based on this record, I have to assume that his "Polack" statement was nothing more than an unfortunate choice of words, or a subconscious slip of the tongue, maybe brought on by the pressure of TV coverage.

Besides, that's not the issue. The issue is what Jimmy Carter said. And the question is whether Jimmy Carter, who had an admirable record as a progressive Southern governor, and who has embraced fair housing, equality, civil rights, and so on, can be believed when he says he just made a poor choice of words when he used "ethnic purity" in answering the question of a reporter who used the words first.

But Carter, who has been involved in a long, grueling, tense political campaign, can't be believed. Despite his record, the words damn him as a racist. At least in the mind of this black leader.

Or maybe he figures that Carter is a "Polack."

Humor In High Places

WASHINGTON — The Constitution does not require that the president of the United States has a sense of humor, but it's an attractive trait in a chief executive all the same. A president who can laugh at himself, even as others are laughing at him, is likely to bear lightly the burdens of his office.

President Ford appears to be just such a man. His pratfalls on an airplane ramp in Austria and on a ski slope in Colorado, among other misadventures, inspired a long series of Jerry-the-Bumblie jokes and political cartoons. If Ford was offended, he never let his feelings show in public. From all accounts the President felt that the gibles were good-natured rather than malicious.

The acid test came on March 25, when Ford attended the annual dinner of the Radio and Television Correspondents' Association. He was introduced there to the comedian, Chevy Chase, whose satiric impressions of a clumsy Ford are a regular feature on the "NBC's Saturday Night" television program ("Mr. Ford was on the campaign trail, announcing in Detroit that he has written his own campaign slogan," Chase said on one show. "The slogan: 'If He's So Dumb, How Come He's President?'").

The two men chatted amiably, and the President laughed along with the audience when Chase ran through one of his Ford routines. "Mr. Chevy Chase, you're a very, very funny suburban," the President said — a reference to the fact that Chevy Chase, Md., is a bedroom community adjacent to Washington, D.C.

Chase is only the latest in a series of comedians who have built their reputations by poking fun at presidents. Mort Sahl aimed his barbs at Dwight D. Eisenhower, while Vaughn Meader won fleeting fame for his impersonation of John F. Kennedy. Impressionist David Frye was equally skillful at portraying Lyndon B. Johnson or Richard M. Nixon.

Humor, nonetheless, is a sometime thing as a political commodity. Kennedy was renowned for his spontaneous wit, which showed to particular advantage at his televised news conferences. But Adlai E. Stevenson's even keener wit proved to be a liability in the presidential campaigns of 1952 and 1956. Eisenhower, his opponent on both occasions, took him to task for making light of the nation's problems.

It's much easier — and safer — for a vice president to indulge his bent for humor. Alben W. Barkley, who served under Harry S. Truman, captivated millions of Americans with his easy-going folksiness. And so did Thomas R. Marshall, Woodrow Wilson's vice president, who coined the phrase, "What this country needs is a good five-cent cigar." Marshall once told this brief story. "There were two brothers. One ran away to sea and the other was elected vice president. Neither was ever heard of again."

Humor is likely to be in short supply in this year's presidential election campaign. There is nothing very hilarious, after all, about unemployment, the Middle East, or most of the other major issues. But a leavening dose of laughter would be welcome. Perhaps the two nominees should take one week off in mid-October and let Chevy Chase and David Frye campaign as their surrogates.

The Reds Like Herring

WASHINGTON — There is some satisfaction in the State Department that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's plan for organic union — which will bring all of Eastern Europe within the borders of the Soviet Union — has not caused the anticipated uproar in Congress and the media. The plan, conceived by Kissinger, is a total sellout to the Soviet Union.

The "organic union" plan was leaked by the State Department to two columnists as a means of testing the Washington waters.

High administration sources privately admit that the purpose of the leak was to assure the Kremlin that President Ford's tough rhetorical line on foreign policy reflected his election problems with Ronald Reagan rather than a change in what passes for thinking at the White House.

The Kremlin is too shrewd to take public cognizance of its pleasure over the Kissinger Doctrine — President Ford's version of the British appeasement policy in the pre-World War II era. But it has caused consternation on Embassy Row.

As one Kremlinologist put it: "The organic union doctrine once in effect will not only give the Soviet Union another 60 divisions and increase the chances of a Soviet attack on mainland China but the mere announcement destroys the hopes of Romania and Poland that they will eventually regain their independence."

Far worse than that, the first reports from Europe indicate that the "organic union" doctrine is being interpreted as one more — and devastating — sign that the United States is abandoning the world to the tender mercies of the Soviet Union and selling the North American Treaty Organization down the river.

Vietnam and Angola were frightening enough to the capitals of Eastern and Western Europe but the Kissinger Doctrine is convincing them that they had best bow to Soviet pressure and make what deals they can with the Kremlin.

Once upon a time in the early postwar era, those who had a clear view of Soviet intentions and suicidal direction of American foreign policy could count on Stalin for some brutal action — some outrageous demonstration of his ruthlessness to arouse the American people. But the Kremlin has learned its lesson.

It does not propose the "organic union" of Eastern Europe, but lets the United States do it — thereby striking a blow for itself and another against us. It takes its minor defeats — Egypt's breakaway is a case in point — and turns them into major victories.

The only possible chance of a categorical repudiation of the Kissinger "organic union" doctrine can come about if Ronald Reagan as he ranges the primaries makes it a major issue.

He is the one man with enough courage and enough of a popular following to force a showdown with the administration.

By iconoclastic reckoning, the next Number Two man to Mao had to be a new face, a Chinese Jimmy Carter; somebody of the generation younger than Mao who was clearly Mao's choice, not a selection of Chou. But who? Or, as the Pekingologists say, Hu?

I turned to a Times Washington bureau colleague, Joseph Lelyveld, an experienced China-watcher, for the name of some dark horse with a good outside chance on a muddy track. Without hesitation, he chose Hua, then head of internal security. I named Hua in my prediction list, to general snickering from friends at State and CIA, and now — just look at him. As solidly ensconced as Number Two as Lin Piao or Liu Shao-chi used to be.

Having thus helped put Hua over the top, I am obliged to try to explain what brought about the events at Peking's Tien An Men Square last week. As the official Chinese account stated, "a handful of class enemies" and "a few bad elements sporting a crewcut" (Haldeman left his imprint), accompanied by 100,000 passersby, beat up Maoist students, smashed bicycles, overturned cars, set fire to barracks and — getting serious — recited "reactionary" poems.

Why did it happen? Conventional China-watching wisdom holds that the succession struggle within the world's most populous nation pits the ideologically pure "radicals" under Mao, against the pragmatic "moderates" supposedly protected by Chou and later led by Teng. In this ideological view, my friend, Hua, rose to the top because he was not clearly identified with either group.

Less conventional wisdom, put forward by Japanese observers, deals with power groups: the party, the army, the police. When the party began to lose its revolutionary zeal in the '60s,

The decision of the Chinese Central Committee seems to have been to take advantage of the riot, to incorporate it into folklore, to use the event as the beginning of a new catharsis. This boiling-over may be what Mao and his followers have needed: big enough to trigger a nationwide purification, but not too big — they hope — to be genuinely counter-revolutionary.

"Struggle is progress," say Chinese officials, "there can be no progress without struggle." When one asks about the deposed Teng, the response is denunciation; when one asks about Hua, however, there is no compensatory buildup — the answer is to praise Mao.

"There is no middle of the road," the officials insist. Communists are on one side, arrayed against "social imperialists" — the Soviets massed on the border, along with "class enemies" inside China. It is not in their interest to admit to moderation.

To paraphrase De Gaulle, China cannot be communist without turmoil. The aging chairman has selected a fresh villain in Teng, and named Hua as the new heir, to keep the pot bubbling. As of now, Hua is the dark horse with the anti-Soviet colors — which is why all of us may have a vested interest in his career.

Perhaps the two nominees should take one week off in mid-October and let Chevy Chase and David Frye campaign as their surrogates.

The Reds Like Herring

WASHINGTON — There is some satisfaction in the State Department that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's plan for "organic union" — which will bring all of Eastern Europe within the borders of the Soviet Union — has not caused the anticipated uproar in Congress and the media. The plan, conceived by Kissinger, is a total sellout to the Soviet Union.

The "organic union" plan was leaked by the State Department to two columnists as a means of testing the Washington waters.

High administration sources privately admit that the purpose of the leak was to assure the Kremlin that President Ford's tough rhetorical line on foreign policy reflected his election problems with Ronald Reagan rather than a change in what passes for thinking at the White House.

The Kremlin is too shrewd to take public cognizance of its pleasure over the Kissinger Doctrine — President Ford's version of the British appeasement policy in the pre-World War II era. But it has caused consternation on Embassy Row.

As one Kremlinologist put it, "The 'organic unity' doctrine once in effect will not only give the Soviet Union another 60 divisions and increase the chances of a Soviet attack on mainland China, but the mere announcement destroys the hopes of Romania and Poland that they will eventually regain their independence."

Far worse than that, the first reports from Europe indicate that the "organic union" doctrine is being interpreted as one more — and devastating — sign that the United States is abandoning the world to the tender mercies of the Soviet Union and selling the North American Treaty Organization down the river.

Vietnam and Angola were frightening enough to the capitals of Eastern and Western Europe, but the Kissinger Doctrine is convincing them that they had best bow to Soviet pressure and make what deals they can with the Kremlin.

Once upon a time, in the early postwar era, those who had a clear view of Soviet intentions and suicidal direction of American foreign policy could count on Stalin for some brutal action, some outrageous demonstration of his ruthlessness, to arouse the American people. But the Kremlin has learned its lesson.

It does not propose the "organic union" of Eastern Europe, but lets the United States do it — thereby striking a blow for itself and another against us. It takes its minor defeats — Egypt's breakaway is a case in point — and parleys them into major victories.

The only possible chance of a categorical repudiation of the Kissinger "organic union" doctrine can come about if Ronald Reagan, as he ranges the primaries, makes it a major issue.

He is the one man with enough courage and enough of a popular following to force a showdown with the administration.

Lots Of Letters For Uncle Sam

The Lincoln Post Office was as busy Thursday night as the old depot, several blocks away, used to be during the holiday rush.

A near steady stream of cars and people fought their way to the mail drop slots and postage machines with a zeal known only to the holidays.

The occasion? The midnight pendulum of Uncle Sam which brings the flock scrambling yearly to get their IRS returns filed. And quite a flock it was, with a total of 15 people in the lobby as late as 11 p.m.

They came in all walks. Some wore suits, some had casual shirts, one wore a Hawaiian print, one had a "Happiness Is" T-shirt.

Some looked happy, some still forlorn. More than one heaved a sigh of relief as they pushed the long white envelope down the slot.

One spent at least a minute shifting his eyes from the "Out of Town" to the "Local" slot, just to be sure. Several weighed their precious cargo to make sure sufficient postage would wing it on its way to the land of no return in Utah.

Notable among the patriotic actors was the young guy who walked into the lobby and paused, gazing at his reflection in the glass windows, and brushed his hair back before depositing his return.

That performance was almost matched by the guy in the blue blazer who wiped a sprinkle of rain from the envelope before depositing it. But, one took the proverbial cake . . .

At 10:30 he was seen perusing the rack of tax forms in the lobby, possibly looking for a last minute deduction.

Through it all, one lone postal clerk leaned on a table and eyed the squeaking hinge on the front door, ready at any moment to leap forth with an oil can and console the aching metal . . . until next year.

The federal office of Internal Revenue Service (IRS) was far behind in counting returns. Dan Seklecki,

Tax Men Anticipate Last Minute Rush

Thursday was the day of reckoning for thousands of Nebraska taxpayers who waited until the last possible day to file in their returns.

Gary Chunka, deputy state tax commissioner, said 569,741 returns had been received by his office as of Wednesday and another 20,000 or so arrived with Thursday's mail.

"We anticipate another 60,000 returns will come in Friday and Monday, our two biggest days," Chunka said.

The federal office of Internal Revenue Service (IRS) was far behind in counting returns. Dan Seklecki, public information officer for the Omaha district office, said officials in Ogden, Utah, haven't had time to count returns since April 1.

Then, the regional office had a total of 416,000 returns in hand, Seklecki said, and was anticipating another 200,000 from Nebraska.

"These last 15 days, we've been flooded with returns," he said.

Seklecki said speculation that people are waiting to file because they expect lower refund checks "doesn't seem to be the case."

Statistics indicate the average refund mailed to Nebraskans is $364, compared to $330 at the same time last year.

"It may mean that those who expect less of a refund are waiting," he added. "Those who have to pay almost always wait until last."

Three out of four taxpayers receive refunds, he said, and only 25% end up paying more.

Though midnight Thursday was the deadline, IRS officials admitted they don't get too tough on late filers for the first day or two.

After that, however, the law provides a maximum penalty of 25% of taxes due for people who fail to file.

Nationally, 3% of all taxpayers miss the deadline.

Seklecki suggested that those who don't file because they can't pay all the taxes due should "pay as much as possible" and attach a note explaining why they didn't pay it all.

In that case, the maximum penalty would be 13% of the amount due, including a 6% fine and 7% annual interest.

Baboon-Proof Fence Isn't

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Fifty baboons that climbed over a "baboon-proof" 12-foot-high fence at nearby Kings Island Amusement Park made monkeys out of frustrated would-be human captors Thursday.

Some 20 park security officers maintained a 24-hour watch near the baboons, which were grouped in a wooded area with underbrush outside the fence, but still on park property.

"We anticipate it'll be a couple of days before we're able to get all the baboons back inside the fence," said park official Dan Aylward.

Until the young, 15-pound baboons were back inside the fence, officials asked the public

"We just can't go in and grab them because they're high-strung and really afraid of humans," Aylward said. "They're all grouped together, but with a sudden disturbance they might separate and we'd have 50 problems instead of one problem."

"It'll probably take a couple of days to condition the baboons into believing there's food inside the fence so they'll go back in," he added. "We've got oranges, bananas and apples — food they like — inside the fence to lure them in."

Until the young, 15-pound baboons were back inside the fence, officials asked the public to stay away from the park, which doesn't open for the season until April 24.

"Thank God, they all stayed together in a group," said Kings Island spokeswoman Ruth Voss. "If they had started roaming around individually, oh my . . ."

The breakout started Wednesday evening from the 1,600-acre park's fenced lion country safari area.

"One baboon made it over the fence and the rest just followed," said Mrs. Voss. "They first went over a 6-foot-high fence and then over a 12-foot-high fence with a two-foot mesh overhand that is supposed to be baboon proof."

Farmers Put Emphasis On Corn And Sorghum

Nebraska farmers intend to plant more acres of corn, sorghum, oats and barley this year, but fewer acres of soybeans, dry beans and sugar beets, the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics announced Thursday.

These intentions are based on an April 1 survey. Actual plantings are subject to departures from prospective plantings as farmers evaluate this report and other factors at planting time, the division commented.

Results of the survey follow:

Corn producers expect to plant 6,900,000 acres to corn in 1976, up 6% from last year. This would be the largest acreage since 1954.

Sorghum growers plan to plant 2,200,000 acres 7% above 1975 and one per cent more than 1974.

Soybean plantings are expected to total 1,000,000 acres, 20% below the previous year and the lowest since 1972.

Oat seedings intentions at 700,000 acres are up one per cent from 1975 and would be the largest acreage since 1970.

Barley planted acreage intentions of 42,000 acres are 11% above the previous year.

Dry bean plantings are expected to total 115,000 acres, down 7% from last year and the same as 1974.

Sugar beet acreage is expected to total 93,000 acres, 5% less than 1975. At survey time there was considerable planting uncertainty due to contract negotiations with beet processors.

Potato producers intend to plant 7,000 acres, down 11% from 1975.

The combined acreage of these eight crops, at 11,067,000 acres, is 3% above 1975.

All hay acreage expected to be harvested is estimated at 4,000,000 compared to 4,050,000 last year.

Nationally, farmers are increasing corn acreage by 6.0% this year, strengthening the possibility of a second straight record crop which could hold down retail food prices, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced.

The department also said consumer grocery prices for the first half of this year may average 4 to 5% above a year ago instead of the previously forecast 6%.

The department's crop reporting board said a survey of plantings as of April 1, plus planned later plantings, indicated 82.7 million acres of corn would be planted this spring. This is compared with plantings of 77.9 million acres last year, which yielded a record harvest of nearly 5.8 billion bushels.

The report said soybean growers in the U.S. apparently discouraged by sharp price declines for their big 1975 crop plus the loss of European markets this year, are cutting plantings to 49.3 million acres, down 9.6% from 1975.

Feeder Will Hear Weilage

Broken Bow — Ray L. Weilage Jr., of Lincoln, assistant vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, will be the featured speaker at the Custer County Feeders and Breeders Association annual banquet at the Broken Bow Auditorium Wednesday.

Arlington Bond Issue Approved

Arlington — Voters in this community have approved a $30,000 bond issue. The funds will help in building a $127,000 athletic complex with costs being shared with the state and federal governments. The issue was passed by a 173 to 54 vote.

Butte Student Heads NU Group

Mr. Sibbel of Butte has been elected president of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Agricultural Economics-Agricribusiness Club for 1976-77. He succeeds Martin Koopman of Meadow Grove. Brian Anderson of Elgin is the new vice president and Tom Hoxworth of Bridgeport, secretary-treasurer.

The board will be asked to make a final ruling on a sex discrimination complaint filed by Dr. Loisjean Tush of UNO, who has since taken employment elsewhere.

In UNL business, Interim Chancellor Adam Breckenridge will ask regents to consider and discuss creating a School of Engineering in the College of Engineering and Technology, and to — Increase by $1 to $3 the tuition rates for high school correspondence study courses, and boost by $2 per semester hour (or $22) tuition for college correspondence courses, effective Sept. 1.

— Accept recommendations on bids for selling Havelock area lands (agronomy farm), and authorize sale of 3.08 acres of land parallel to Havelock Ave. from 84th to 98th.

— Increase rental rates by $15 per student per school year in Love Memorial Coop, and by $13 monthly per family living in Park Apartments and Colonial Terrace Apartments.

— Increase tuition by $15 per quarter, to $140, and dorm room and board rates by $20 to $355, at the NU School of Technical Agriculture, Curtis, effective Oct. 1.

— Establish ticket prices for 1976-77 basketball games in the new Sports Center, and to review the present policy on distributing complimentary tickets.

Regents will hear a report on an "Area of Excellence," the UNO Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department, for which the Legislature denied appropriations a third time for a new $6.7 million building.

In central administration business, NU President D. B. Varner will seek regents' formal recognition of differences in age, living style and enrollment patterns at UNO and the Lincoln campus, in relation to student fees.

A second recommendation endorses continuing to levy fees, but based on student bodies' varying characteristics. A third would have regents in their 1977-78 budget request supply institutional (tax) support for some programs and activities now paid wholly or in part by student fees.

Those include career planning and placement, career counseling, academic health

NU Regents To Consider Student Fees Allocations

To correct some inconsistencies in funding sources, University of Nebraska Regents will be asked Saturday to change student fees allocations, and to restrict smoking to designated areas on NU campuses.

The board will meet at 9 a.m. in Regents Hall 3835 Holdrege. A public hearing on revised constitution and bylaws of the Omaha campus student government is scheduled at 10 a.m. for adoption during the session.

education, new student orientation, environmental health, radio KVNO-FM, fine arts, general facilities and maintenance of student union public use areas.

UNO and UNL student regents have complained that student fees now among the highest in the Big Eight, shouldn't support such projects.

Clint Bellows, outgoing UNO student regent, will offer a resolution to designate smoking areas in all locations on NU campuses where large numbers of individuals gather, such as eating, study and recreation areas, and others including social gatherings. Bellows proposes "strict" enforcement.

Varner will ask regents to establish masters degree programs in criminal justice at UNO, and to scale down requirements for the number of NU employees who must take the state defensive driving course.

Clint Bellows, outgoing UNO student regent, will offer a resolution to designate smoking areas in all locations on NU campuses where large numbers of individuals gather, such as eating, study and recreation areas, and others including social gatherings. Bellows proposes "strict" enforcement.

Varner will ask regents to establish masters degree programs in criminal justice at UNO, and to scale down requirements for the number of NU employees who must take the state defensive driving course.

Regents will hear a report on an "Area of Excellence," the UNO Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department, for which the Legislature denied appropriations a third time for a new $6.7 million building.

Those include career planning and placement, career counseling, academic health education, new student orientation, environmental health, radio KVNO-FM, fine arts, general facilities and maintenance of student union public use areas.

UNO and UNL student regents have complained that student fees now among the highest in the Big Eight, shouldn't support such projects.

Farmers Put Emphasis On Corn And Sorghum

Nebraska farmers intend to plant more acres of corn, sorghum, oats and barley this year, but fewer acres of soybeans, dry beans and sugar beets, the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics announced Thursday.

These intentions are based on an April 1 survey. Actual plantings are subject to departures from prospective plantings as farmers evaluate this report and other factors at planting time, the division commented.

Results of the survey follow:

Corn producers expect to plant 6,900,000 acres to corn in 1976, up 6% from last year. This would be the largest acreage since 1954.

Sorghum growers plan to plant 2,200,000 acres, 7% above 1975 and one per cent more than 1974.

Soybean plantings are expected to total 1,000,000 acres, 20% below the previous year and the lowest since 1972.

Oat seedings intentions at 700,000 acres are up one per cent from 1975 and would be the largest acreage since 1970.

Barley planted acreage intentions of 42,000 acres are 11% above the previous year.

Dry bean plantings are expected to total 115,000 acres, down 7% from last year and the same as 1974.

Sugar beet acreage is expected to total 93,000 acres, 5% less than 1975. At survey time there was considerable planting uncertainty due to contract negotiations with beet processors.

Potato producers intend to plant 7,000 acres, down 11% from 1975.

The combined acreage of these eight crops, at 11,057,000 acres, is 3% above 1975.

All hay acreage expected to be harvested is estimated at 4,000,000 compared to 4,050,000 last year.

Nationally, farmers are increasing corn acreage by 6.0% this year, strengthening the possibility of a second straight record crop which could hold down retail food prices, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced.

The department also said consumer grocery prices for the first half of this year may average 4 to 5% above a year ago instead of the previously forecast 6%.

The department's crop reporting board said a survey of plantings as of April 1, plus planned later plantings, indicated 82.7 million acres of corn would be planted this spring. This is compared with plantings of 77.9 million acres last year, which yielded a record harvest of nearly 5.8 billion bushels.

The report said soybean growers in the U.S. apparently discouraged by sharp price declines for their big 1975 crop plus the loss of European markets this year, are cutting plantings to 49.3 million acres, down 9.6% from 1975.

NU Regents To Consider Student Fees Allocations

To correct some inconsistencies in funding sources, University of Nebraska Regents will be asked Saturday to change student fees allocations, and to restrict smoking to designated areas on NU campuses.

The board will meet at 9:30 a.m. in Regents Hall, 3835 Holdrege. A public hearing on revised constitution and bylaws of the Omaha campus student government is scheduled at 10 a.m., for adoption during the session.

In central administration business, NU President D. B. Varner will seek regents' formal recognition of differences in age, living style and enrollment patterns at UNO and the Lincoln campus, in relation to student fees.

A second recommendation endorses continuing to levy fees, but based on student bodies' varying characteristics. A third would have regents in their 1977-78 budget request supply institutional (tax) support for some programs and activities now paid wholly or in part by student fees.

Those include career planning and placement, career counseling, academic health

5 Omaha Men Guilty On Gambling Counts

Omaha (UPI) — Five Omaha area residents were found guilty Thursday on charges filed in connection with what the federal government said was once one of the nation's largest gambling operations involving bets on athletic events and horse races.

U.S. District Judge Albert G. Schatz deferred sentencing and continued bonds for John Salanitro, Paul Cappellano Sr., his son, Paul Jr., Frank A. Bonfiglio and Maxie Abramson. Salanitro was the only one of the 18 defendants to be charged with all five counts in an indictment handed down a year ago by a federal grand jury. The government dismissed three counts against him, and Schatz found him guilty of the two remaining gambling charges Thursday.

The judge found the other four defendants guilty on one count each.

Schatz's rulings were expected since the five had waived their rights to a jury trial and acknowledged the government's evidence against them was correct. They presented no defense, but preserved their rights of appeal on pre-trial errors.

Defense attorneys have claimed some government evidence was obtained from illegal wiretaps.

Schatz denied defense motions to suppress all evidence the government obtained through court-authorized wiretaps during the time of the gambling opera-

Stamford-Orleans Plan Okayed

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Alma — Facing two contradictory consolidation plans, the Harlan County school reorganization committee tentatively expressed itself Wednesday night for a Stamford-Orleans merging and against the Stamford-Alma plan.

But the controversy remained far from settled even after two hours of debate and a one-and-a-half hour executive session. According to Harlan County attorney Jack Ott, "we've still got two trains going at one another on the same track."

He told reporters after the meeting that an agreement of the Stamford and Alma school boards appears to be binding regardless of any action by the county or state reorganization committees. Also, Stamford and Orleans patrons still must pass on their proposed merger at a special election.

Adding to the confusion, explained Ott, is a legal requirement that most proposals must come before the county committee again to be finalized. He predicted litigation may be required to resolve the matter.

Osborne Is Hike-Bike Chairman

Nebraska Football Coach Tom Osborne has been named honorary chairman of the 1976 Hike-Bike for Retarded Citizens, according to George Crosby, executive director of the Capital Association for Retarded Citizens.

On May 8, Lincoln residents will have an opportunity to participate in the event. The campaign calls on volunteer citizens to either hike or bike for retarded children over a measured course. Businesses and individuals will be asked to pledge so much per mile for each mile walked or biked by participants.

Those interested in participating as walkers, riders or sponsors may contact the association for further details.

Jobless Rate Up

During March, unemployment hit its highest recorded level for the Omaha area — 9.3%.

However, in computing that figure the State Labor Department has weighted its formula to give greater consideration to unemployed persons whose unemployment benefits have run out but have not found jobs.

State Labor Commissioner Gerald Chizek said the new formula gives a truer picture of unemployment.

Under the new formula, Lincoln experienced a 5.8% rate of unemployment, and statewide unemployment was 6.5%.

When compared with February's figures which used the old formula, March's unemployment appears to have jumped markedly. However, when February's figures are recomputed according to the new formula, it shows that Lincoln's unemployment remained constant while statewide unemployment dropped.

Compared to last year's figures adjusted for the new formula, unemployment statewide has dropped from last March's level, while it is slightly higher in both Omaha and Lincoln.

In Lincoln, 5,650 jobless persons were reported for March, while Omaha had 23,350. The state's total was 45,200.

Chizek said March experienced a slight drop in manufacturing employment, while construction picked up.

Lincoln's work force during March totaled 92,250; the state work force was 649,700.

Nuclear Threat Not Posed By Blasts

By BOB GUNTHER

Two recent explosions at the Cooper Nuclear Power Station at Brownville posed no radiation threats to public health and safety, the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission has concluded.

No abnormal releases of radiation were noted from either incidents which occurred Nov. 4, 1975 and Jan. 7, 1976, NRC investigators said. Neither explosion involved features directly associated with the reactor's fissile process.

The NRC conclusions are contained in two reports recently released.

Investigators said the Jan. 7 explosion which extensively damaged a small building handling waste gases was caused by an ice build-up which blocked the circulation of hydrogen gas.

"The valve was found in the closed position even though the control room valve position indicating lights and the control switch showed the valve to be open. Unauthorized and/or uncontrolled changes had been made on the electrical wiring to this valve . . ." the report stated.

"Authorization had not been given to change any wiring.

Sparks Ignited Gas

The Nov. 5 explosion occurred when an air sampler was turned on. Sparks caused by the sampler's motor apparently ignited the gas.

Employees at the site of the explosion were not contaminated by radioactivity, the report said a hospital examination revealed.

"Each of the six personnel present and witnessing the explosion received less than 15 millirems of exposure during the entire day of the accident," the report said.

A millirem is one-thousandth of the amount of radiation used in taking an X-ray.

"Although the release of gas-

(es) was unplanned and unmonitored for a period of time, there were no indications that abnormal conditions existed outside of the (station's boundaries). Therefore it is considered that this occurrence presented no adverse potential consequences from the standpoint of public health and safety."

Likewise, the report on the Jan. 7 concluded:

"The explosion did cause the release, at ground level, of radioactive gases, but the gases released were those which normally would have been released from the stack and did not constitute a hazard to the public . . . There were no measurable exposures to personnel which were above the normal background nor was there any significant spread of contamination."

Tech College Lawsuit Against Cheyenne County Is Dismissed

Sidney (AP) — The Western Nebraska Technical Community College suit to get Cheyenne County to turn over tax money collected for the college area has been dismissed from district court here.

College officials had petitioned the court in early March to order the county treasurer to release more than $75,000 in 1975 tax funds collected to date.

But the county commissioners previously had ordered treasurer M.G.P. Nissen not to release the funds and also contended that the college had not filed the legal papers needed to withdraw funds from the treasurer's account.

"We pointed out to them (college officials) that they hadn't even asked for the funds yet and until they did we didn't believe they had a chance with the case in court," County Atty. Thomas Sonntag said Thursday.

According to court records, college officials filed the proper papers last week. Nissen released the tax monies at that time under advisement from Sonntag that it would be fruitless.

The Sheridan County board, in its suit, contends the levy amounts to a statewide property tax and, as such, violates an amendment to the Nebraska Constitution.

Kuhlman said local postmasters will make decisions as to what two hours then post offices will be open on Saturdays after May 1.

Major communities affected by the cutback include: Ogallala, Sidney, North Platte, Gering.

Kuhlman said most of the post offices in the area are now open.

Saturday Mail Service To Be Cut

North Platte (AP) — Effective May 1, postal customers in the western portion of the state will have to make do with curtailed window service on Saturdays.

According to Vic Kuhlman of North Platte, regional postmaster, all 112 post offices in the "69" zip code area will reduce Saturday window operations to two hours.

Kuhlman said most of the post offices in the area are now open.

Sparks Ignited Gas

The Nov. 5 explosion occurred when an air sampler was turned on. Sparks caused by the sampler's motor apparently ignited the gas.

Employees at the site of the explosion were not contaminated by radioactivity, the report said a hospital examination revealed.

"Each of the six personnel present and witnessing the explosion received less than 15 millirems of exposure during the entire day of the accident," the report said.

A millirem is one-thousandth of the amount of radiation used in taking an X-ray.

"Although the (release of gases) was unplanned and unmonitored for a period of time, there were no indications that abnormal conditions existed outside of the (station's boundaries). Therefore it is considered that this occurrence presented no adverse potential consequences from the standpoint of public health and safety."

Likewise, the report on the Jan. 7 concluded:

"The explosion did cause the release, at ground level, of radioactive gases, but the gases released were those which normally would have been released from the stack and did not constitute a hazard to the public . . . There were no measurable exposures to personnel which were above the normal background nor was there any significant spread of contamination."

Third Suit Filed Over Hotel Blast

Fremont (AP) — A suit for $62,688 has been filed in Dodge County District Court by M. Bruce Martin and Elden Johnson, doing business as Pathfinder Antiques, in connection with the January explosion which killed 20 at the Pathfinder Hotel.

Under state law, counties are permitted to levy up to a 2.5 mill property tax for support of the area technical community colleges.

The Sheridan County board, in its suit, contends the levy amounts to a statewide property tax and, as such, violates an amendment to the Nebraska Constitution.

In the suit, the plaintiffs contend the explosion which damaged their business resulted from a gas leak. They allege the leak resulted from a separation in gas mains of a 2-inch plastic pipe and separation of a coupling.

The suit also charges negligence by both companies.

It alleges E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. did not advise the gas company of dangers inherent in the use of plastic piping. The plaintiffs allege the company did not emphasize the need to anchor the pipe to prevent pull-out, nor check for safe installation.

The petition alleges Nebraska Natural Gas failed to tell its employees about the pipe's contraction characteristics and failed to properly anchor, secure and install the pipe, and did not have proper emergency procedures.

Tech College Lawsuit Against Cheyenne County Is Dismissed

Sidney (AP) — The Western Nebraska Technical Community College suit to get Cheyenne County to turn over tax money collected for the college area has been dismissed from district court here.

College officials had petitioned the court in early March to order the county treasurer to release more than $75,000 in 1975 tax funds collected to date.

But the county commissioners previously had ordered treasurer M.G. P. Nissen not to release the funds and also contended that the college had not filed the legal papers needed to withdraw funds from the treasurer's account.

"We pointed out to them (college officials) that they hadn't even asked for the funds yet and until they did we didn't believe they had a chance with the case in court," County Atty. Thomas Sonntag said Thursday.

According to court records, college officials filed the proper papers last week. Nissen released the tax monies at that time under advisement from Sonntag that it would be fruitless to contest the case in district court when it is already on appeal before the Nebraska Supreme Court. Sheridan County filed the case before the state high court.

Money-Market Funds Disliked By Government

Jane Bryant Quinn

By JANE BRYANT QUINN
New York — Something there is that doesn't like a money-market mutual fund — and that something is the U.S. government's banking agencies. They don't like them because these handy funds often pay higher interest rates to small investors than are available through banks. Naturally, smart depositors then take some of their money out of banks and put it into the funds. This is considered unAmerican, and the government has proposed a way to slow it down a little.

Small investors are supposed to keep their money in banks, at controlled low interest rates, so the banks can re-lend to the housing market. This duty is not laid on wealthy investors, who can and do get large returns by putting $50,000 or $100,000 into such things as commercial paper and large-denomination bank certificates of deposit (which carry no interest-rate ceiling).

When interest rates rise, the rich get large returns. But no matter how high the general level of rates, a depositor with $1,000 can get no more than 7½% from a bank — and to get it, he has to lock his money up for six years.

Better Idea

The money-market funds have a better idea. They pool the money of many investors to buy commercial paper, large certificates of deposit (CDs), bankers acceptances, high-paying government securities and other instruments you couldn't buy yourself. The funds promise to keep your capital safe — if you put $1,000 in, you'll get $1,000 out. But the interest rates our money earns will rise and fall in line with what's happening in the money markets. The money funds charge no sales commissions.

At the moment, money funds yield only around 5%, so investors aren't paying much attention to them. But at the height of the last interest-rate cycle, 12% yields were common. One fund (the Reserve Fund, New York City) reached a peak of 14%.

Remember the immortal line from W.C. Fields — "Never give a sucker an even break and never smarten up a chump." The money funds have smartened up small investors, and the government is mad.

They see the funds as a loophole in the interest-rate ceilings they enforce for small depositors. So they're considering ways to cramp the funds' style before interest rates swing up again.

Ruling Asked

What makes matters worse, from the government's point of view, is that the Fidelity Daily Income Trust, in Boston, has petitioned the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for a ruling that bank CDs in their portfolio are insured against bank collapse, just as individual deposits are insured. The FDIC has been delaying its decision, but it's possible that the CDS bought by money funds are indeed insured. If the funds could advertise that point, it would attract even more small investors.

U.S. Steel Plans Price Boosts

PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. on Thursday announced price hikes of 7 per cent on its rail products and 6 per cent on about half its tubular products.

Both increases are effective May 1.

Rail products are used for tracks, and tubular products are used in oil and gas drilling equipment.

The nation's largest steelmaker raised prices on the same products last September. At that time prices on rail products went up about 10 per cent and on tubular products about 8 per cent.

The cost of standard rails went from $245 to

Bonds Wanted For CB Plant

Clear Lake, Iowa (UPI) — The E.F. Johnson Co. has asked the city to issue $4 million in industrial development revenue bonds to expand its facility into what could be the largest citizens' band radio manufacturing operation in the world.

Johnson, which is headquartered in Waseka, Minn., and has Iowa manufacturing plants here and in Garner and Mason City, has guaranteed payment of the bonds, which it would sell.

Clear Lake plant manager Duane Morris said expansion plans still are incomplete but if the city approves the request, the firm plans acquisition of a building it currently leases, along with additional real estate in Clear Lake and Garner.

Morris said that ultimately, Johnson plans to transfer all manufacturing of CB radios to the Clear Lake facility, which he said would make it the largest such operation in the world.

Big Board volume sagged to 15.10 million shares—a low since Jan. 2—from 18.44 million on Wednesday.

The slow pace of activity was attributed largely to the start of Passover and an apparent tendency among investors to get an early start on the three-day Easter weekend. The markets will be closed on Friday.

Analysts said the sluggish activity made it difficult to read much significance into the market's movements.

However, they said, it was apparent that the market was drawing some support from the generally bright tenor of corporate earnings reports for the first quarter.

"Many of the reports had been fully anticipated," said Larry Wachtel at Bache & Co. "Nevertheless, their cumulative weight is having some impact."

Another plus in the background was government data issued this week showing further inventory building by businesses and another rise in personal income during March, as reported by the Commerce Department Thursday morning.

The best showing among the various Dow Jones averages was posted by the transportation indicator, which gained 2.72 to 204.23.

That reflected point-plus gains in the stocks of Southern Railroad and Mississippi River Corp. The two railroad concerns said they were studying possible ways to merge.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Aboard M/V Odessa — "Tipping is against company policy," said the purser. "But we found passengers forcing — yes, forcing — money on our stewardesses. So the captain has permitted them to take a small gift." He looked serious. He sighed. He shook his head.

We're rocking along on the Soviet Union's brand new cruise ship, M/V Odessa. Five hundred American passengers meet 250 Russian crew.

"About 40% of the girls will absolutely refuse to take anything," said the purser. (What about the other 60%, I wondered? No will power?)

I went right down and tried to give $5 to Lila who makes up my room. (Not much of a tip, but I thought I'd go slow pushing a little class on Russia's classless society.)

I give you my word, she put her hands behind her back and shook her head — no. I put the $5 in an envelope, handed it to her and said: "Please." The only word I know in Russian.

So she took it. In the afternoon, she came down with a package from the Russian gift shop. "Please," said Lila. The package held a hand-painted wooden spoon. They sell them in the shop for around $5.

No wonder Kissinger has such a hard time.

The Odessa, built by the British last year, has only been cruising since December. Saturday night from New Orleans to Caribbean ports. Next Saturday morning back in New Orleans and begin all over again.

"Before they left Russia, the service people — mostly girls — were given a crash course in waiting on Americans," said the ship's New York agent. "But after that it's been on-the-job training."

With 500 new Americans and Canadians every week, I can imagine it was hectic. The girls have only a few working words, I couldn't get the whole picture. A pity. Might be a Russian novel in it.

I was certainly curious about how a Russian ship would be," said an American passenger. "I must say it's been OK. I tried to tip a bartender a few times but he seemed surprised and just left the money on the bar.

"Then the menu with no choice. Take it or leave it. But they give you plenty. Did you notice there were 10 courses last night? And the midnight buffet is really lavish.

The Soviet Union is cautious about letting its citizens wander around in capitalist, over-produced America. Visiting trade mission members shop for things that are everyday to us: Can openers and scissors. Thread and needles and the thrift bin items in the department store, drugstores.

The Odessa crew doesn't get time to rub up against the fleshpots of New Orleans. The last passenger leaves at 11 Saturday morning. The next wave begins to board at 3 in the afternoon.

The crew has just four hours to houseclean the ship from top to bottom.

Standard Letter Sizes Suggested

Washington (UPI) — The Postal Rate Commission Thursday recommended letter envelope sizes be standardized so the Postal Service can sort and route them by machine at less cost.

If the regulations are adopted, mailers would have to pay a surcharge for oversize envelopes. Undersize envelopes would be banned.

The Postal Service has sought standardized letter sizes since 1973 because letters cost more to handle if they are too big or too small for its processing equipment to handle.

The commission, an independent agency Congress set up to rule on postage rates and other Postal Service policies, said its recommendations are a first step toward basic mail classification reform.

The commission submitted the recommendations to the Postal Service Board of Governors. If it approves the regulations would go into effect.

Two years later, giving envelope manufacturers time to comply.

The proposed rules would apply to first class and air mail and to some third class mail which fails to meet present size and shape regulations the commission said.

The commission recommended other cost-cutting procedures such as giving discounts to encourage big mailers to present their first class and air mail letters.

The commission decided allowance should be made for the work mailers perform that saves cost for the Postal Service. The cooperating mailer would be charged one cent less per piece.

The commission also recommended a two-part price structure for business reply mail: a simpler bulk rate for parcel post changes in special rates for certain fourth class mail and changes in special rates for catalogs.

CARRIERS EN ROUTE TO AUSTRIA

Headed for a 13-day all-expenses paid trip to Austria and Yugoslavia are Lincoln Journal and Star newspaper carriers Tom Wolfe (left) and Karl Elmshauser. The two are among 134 national winners of Parade magazine's 1976 Young Columbus XX Carrier contest, also sponsored by the Sunday Journal and Star. Wolfe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Excess Paperwork Problem Scrutinized

A special task force is being assembled at the direction of Gov. J. James Exon to rid state government of unnecessary paperwork.

Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan has the job of studying the amount of needless paper channeled through government. Whelan said he is putting together a committee of state officials, local officials and businessmen to work on possible problem areas.

Whelan already has some ideas on what could and should not be demanded of citizens. He said Social Security numbers should not be used by the state except on tax returns.

Whelan said many forms are required by federal agencies and

We can't do anything about that.

One approach taken by another state, Whelan said, was to abolish all its prescribed forms. That let lower level workers develop the type of form they thought would be most useful.

Whelan hopes to find out what is being done in other states to curb the growing amount of government paperwork.

Board Meeting Set To Deal With Taxes

Tax Commissioner Bill Peters announced Thursday that the State Board of Equalization will meet next Wednesday to consider a tax rate change.

The board is required by statute to meet within 15 days of the end of the legislative session to determine if a retroactive tax rate increase is needed.

Although figures are subject to change, Peters has previously predicted current tax rates would produce enough revenue to cover the unicameral's $451 million budget.

The meeting is scheduled for 1 p.m.

Cash Flow Problems Delay Aid To Schools

More than $5 million for distribution of April's state school aid payments will be delayed until the end of the month according to the State Education Department.

The department, according to Education Commissioner Anne Campbell, was informed that the delay was due to cash flow problems at the state level.

The Education Department each month seeks the money through a voucher system and the Department of Administrative Services then issues the warrants for release of the funds from the treasury.

The third state office involved is the state treasurer's office informed the Education Department of the problem.

The state treasurer's office informed D.E. officials that warrants probably would not be available until the end of the month.

The Education Department statement read:

"Al Bielen, director of finance at the Education Department, said the total April funds would be $5,000,592."

S. Dakotan Hesitates On School

Pierre, S.D. (AP) — Gov. Richard Kneip said he is hesitant to commit South Dakota to a proposed regional college of veterinary medicine at the University of Nebraska Lincoln.

He suggested other contract arrangements could be studied by the five-state Old West Regional Commission if Nebraska starts the $39 million college on its own.

The governor met Wednesday with state education officials and livestock representatives to discuss the feasibility of a regional veterinary college. It would serve Old West states of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana and Wyoming.

A researcher for the commission, Clarence Cole, suggested that the other four member states of the commission pay Nebraska a fee of about $2,000 per student to amortize revenue bonds for the college.

Cole said South Dakota would be committed to the school for about 30 years under the plan. But Kneip said he is not sure whether a governor or the legislature should tie the hands of others for 30 years.

South Dakota now has 22 students enrolled in out-of-state veterinary schools under contract agreements. But Cole said contracts are becoming more restrictive and veterinary students are not certain if or where they will be accepted.

Minot Mother, Daughter Rescued From Flooding

Minot, N.D. (UPI) — Workers rescued a woman and daughter by boat Thursday and piled more tons of clay on Minot's 10- to 20-foot dikes against flood waters climbing rapidly toward an all-time record crest this Easter weekend.

Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., wearing a hard hat and raincoat in light rain sprinkles, walked along the dikes looking at the high water in often flooded Minot and said, "This is enough. We can keep putting people through the wringer like this. We've got to build a dam."

Nearly 13,000 persons, one-third of Minot's population have evacuated a 10-block-wide path along the Souris River through the middle of the city and 1,200 of the town of Velva's 3,600 residents 22 miles downstream left their homes.

The fast moving Souris was three feet above flood stage and starting to erode dikes.

Officials said it would climb nearly three more feet before cresting Saturday.

Mayor Chester Reiten said the break in the dikes could send 6 to 14 feet of water flooding through 4,200 homes six schools two shopping centers 100 other stores and 10 churches causing more than $50,000 damage.

Burdick said he will urge construction of a proposed $81 million Burlington Dam, eight miles

Hunter's latest encounter with the law was the second time in less than a month that the unarmed man allegedly pulled a robbery and waited for police officers said.

Orlando Police Department records show that Hunter, 52, was arrested March 19 after one of the owners of an Orlando dress shop refused the man's demands for money.

Hunter's biggest fear now is that he will be released from jail, where he gets regular meals. But there is a limit to his freedom.

He suggested foundation money be sought for HEW research "if we feel that it's just too critical and too sensitive a kind of thing to really be able to bear out here in public and still be able to answer to the taxpaying public behind us."

"I don't say there is no valuable end to the research —

PAINT STRIPING TRUCK . . . now in bicentennial colors.

It's Striping Time Again

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

What's red, white and blue all over and leaves a trail wherever it goes?

The city's centennial paint striping truck, that's what.

Every spring city crews spread 4,500 gallons of yellow and 3,500 gallons of white paint on city streets. This year is no different. Except for the truck.

Motorists can't miss it. No longer is it a drab institutional orange hue. The ten-year-old truck finally got its colors this spring, thanks to the crews who decided they'd paint the paint truck.

City Traffic Engineer Bob Holsinger said crews are putting down the first coat of traffic lane markings this spring. In August, the crews will paint school crosswalks and in September, the second coat of paint will go down on city streets.

Five guys run the stripper. It takes a driver, one to run the paint machine and three in the cone truck which shadows the stripper. Traffic cone markers are placed behind the freshly painted stripes to warn motorists to take care.

Even though the paint is fast-drying, Holsinger said driving over the lines is a violation because motorists can mess up the job. Motorists can be ticketed by police for "defacing a traffic control device."

Each year it takes the crews a little longer to repaint the stripes. It takes more paint each year, too.

The city budgeted $52,000 this year to paint the centerlines and lane lines, crosswalks, parking stalls and traffic signal poles.

That money bought 4,500 gallons of yellow paint ($22,500), 3,500 gallons of white paint ($17,500), 70,000 pounds of reflective beads ($9,300), 250 gallons of red paint ($1,250), 50 gallons of green paint ($250), 1,500 gallons of solvent ($750) and miscellaneous paint supplies ($450).

Beads are clear glass spheres which are mixed in with the paint to help motorists see the lane markings at night.

It takes a heap of beads. Holsinger said it takes 15 gallons of paint to put down a solid center line for one mile. The paint truck will drop eight pounds of reflective beads for each gallon of paint. So for every mile of solid lines there are 128 pounds of beads.

Because the city has annexed land and is improving its arterial streets, Holsinger said it kicks the paint consumption up.

As a result he estimates he'll need $53,560 next year for paint supplies.

Not all streets will receive a paint job this summer. In the downtown and other highly traveled areas, plastic markings are imbedded in the pavement instead. Plastic lines are supposed to be more durable.

Since two sets of crews are working 16 hours a day to get the streets painted, it's a safe bet that sometime this summer Lincoln motorists will screech to a halt behind the paint striping truck.

As you mumble to yourself, take a look at that fresh paint and centerline. Do you see any of those round beads?

DEAR ABBY Our English teacher said we had to write to someone in another city as a homework assignment, so I am writing to you.

Dear Abby You are solving my problem without even doing it becuz I chose you to write to.

I think your column is pretty good I don't always agree with your answers but then nobody is perfect. I shan't give you a lot of credit. It takes a lot of guts to tell people what to do because you know what happens to people who stick their nose in other people's business.

Every week I drive 650 miles to see her. We love seeing each other but when I prepare to leave she cries and begs me not to go. It just tears me apart.

I love her so much I can't bring myself to let her forget me. Some of my friends are divorced and they never see their kids. They say that it's just a matter of putting them out of your mind and that if I really loved Lisa, I would be a man about it get out of her life and stay out.

Would it be more humane to Lisa if I just walked out of her life and never came back so that she could forget about me?

DESPERATE DADDY

DEAR DADDY I disagree with your friends. In time Lisa will learn to accept the fact that you come and go. She will also realize that you love her. If you suddenly disappear forever, she'll assume you've deserted her. Continue seeing Lisa whenever possible and try to build a good father-daughter relationship.

It would be wrong to lead spades ahead of hearts. Let's say you started by playing the K-A of spades and found the suit divided 5-1. If you then tackled the hearts — cashing the A-K and ruffing a heart — you would find yourself going down one if the suit proved to be divided 4-2. You would lack the entries to take advantage of dummy's fifth heart.

By playing hearts first, you give yourself an extra chance to develop a twelfth trick. You never lose the contract because you led hearts first; you sometimes lose it if you lead spades first.

Carter, Udall Court Pennsylvania Labor

By United Press International
Morris Udall and Jimmy Carter got up early Thursday and went after the labor vote that is supposed to be Henry Jackson's property in the Pennsylvania primary April 27.

Jackson, who spent heavily in the past month to win the Massachusetts and New York primaries, was indoors in Philadelphia calling potential contributors to ask for money.

Republican Ronald Reagan and Democrat George Wallace, the conservative heroes in their parties, campaigned again in Texas, each trying to siphon support from the other in the May 1 Texas Race, in which members of one party can vote in the other's primary.

Reagan reiterated what is shaping up as his most damaging attack yet on the administration — the alleged "giveaway" of the Panama Canal. As he has dozens of times before, Reagan said, "It's ours. We bought and paid for it and we darn well will keep it."

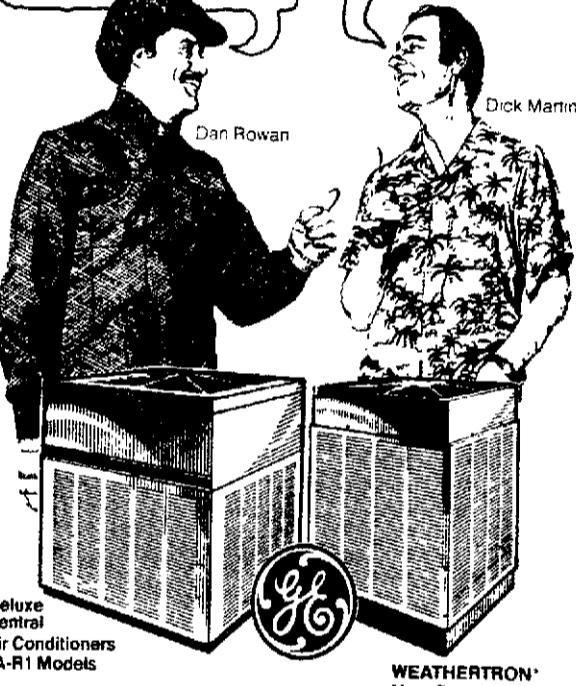

Ford spokesman Ron Nessen said the President is seeking in the negotiations with Panama a treaty that would guard U.S. interests in the waterway over the next 30 to 50 years. He also said in response to questions that failure to come up with a new treaty could result in anti-U.S. violence in Panama and confrontation with Latin America.

Carter, Udall Court Pennsylvania Labor

By United Press International

Morris Udall and Jimmy Carter got up early Thursday and went after the labor vote that is supposed to be Henry Jackson's property in the Pennsylvania primary April 27.

Jackson, who spent heavily in the past month to win the Massachusetts and New York primaries, was indoors in Philadelphia calling potential contributors to ask for money.

Republican Ronald Reagan and Democrat George Wallace, the conservative heroes in their parties, campaigned again in Texas, each trying to siphon support from the other in the May 1 Texas Race, in which members of one party can vote in the other's primary.

Reagan reiterated what is shaping up as his most damaging attack yet on the administration — the alleged "giveaway" of the Panama Canal. As he has dozens of times before, Reagan said, "It's ours. We bought and paid for it and we darn well will keep it."

Ford spokesman Ron Nessen said the President is seeking in the negotiations with Panama a treaty that would guard U.S. interests in the waterway over the next 30 to 50 years. He also said in response to questions that failure to come up with a new treaty could result in anti-U.S. violence in Panama and confrontation with Latin America.

Both Carter and Udall were up early at plant gates talking about economic issues in the heavily industrialized state Jackson expects to win.

Carter shook hands at the General Electric plant in Erie, saying, "The big issue in Pennsylvania and the nation is jobs . . . the alienation and despair we have known will not end until we put our people to work."

Udall toured the Fisher body plant in suburban Pittsburgh and received a warm reception from many of the workers in the plant who left their posts to shake hands with him and hear him talk about full employment and comprehensive health care.

Asked about the latest Gallup Poll showing him in fifth place with 5% support among Democrats, Udall said, "Where I can get known, I do well. I'll be living in Pennsylvania during the next week, shaking hands night and day, visiting plants."

He said suspension of Federal Election Commission matching funds prohibited him from spending much on television commercials. "I'm waging a poor man's campaign," he said.

The Gallup Poll in question showed Carter and Humphrey widening their lead among Democrats in the past four weeks — Carter with 32% and Humphrey 31% — with Wallace falling to 13%, Jackson dropping off sharply to 6% and Udall stagnating.

McCollister Lists Stock Holdings Worth $136,171

Washington (AP) — Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., holds stock with a book value of $136,171 in the family corporation now run by his son, he has reported to the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct.

His wife received $4,916.69 last year as a director of McCollister and Co., the congressman reported.

The company, started by McCollister's father and then taken over by the congressman before he passed it on to his son, does no business with the federal government, his report stated.

House members are required to regularly file reports to the Ethics Committee listing business affiliations, stock holdings and sources of outside income of more than $5,000.

The only other item listed by the congressman, a Senate candidate this year, was a $300 honorarium from the Continental Can Co., which he said he donated to the Boy Scouts.

The company, started by McCollister's father and then taken over by the congressman

94% Assign Top Priority To Inflation, Survey Finds

Despite the improvement in the economy, a striking 94% of the American people feel that "keeping inflation under control" is the chief priority for the next President.

Closely behind as areas of major concern are "controlling federal spending," "restoring confidence in government" and "working for peace in the world," each singled out by 88% for major attention.

Far down the list are a series of issues that received much attention in the early primaries. Among them are "school busing to achieve racial balance," cited by only 38%; "legalized abortion," mentioned by 34%; and "aid to cities," with 43%.

The top issues centered on the economy and the crisis of confidence in government:

"Legalized abortion," which are mentioned by 38% and 34% respectively.

Recently, the Harris Survey asked a cross section of 1,512 adults nationwide:

"As far as you personally are concerned, do you feel that (READ ITEM) should be a major concern and priority for the next president, a minor concern and priority, or hardly a concern and priority at all?"

PRIORITIES FOR NEXT PRESIDENT

	Major Concern	Per cent
Keeping inflation under control	94
Controlling federal spending	88
Working for peace in the world	88
Restoring confidence in government	88
Finding jobs for the unemployed	85
Maintaining social security on a sound basis	85
Restoring integrity to government	84
Controlling crime	83
Not raising federal taxes	81
Welfare reform	79
Controlling drug abuse	78

Despite the recent decline in the public's expectations of what big government can achieve, the American public still dished up a full platter of concerns for the next president to deal with beginning in 1977.

94% Assign Top Priority To Inflation, Survey Finds

Despite the improvement in the economy, a striking 94% of the American people feel that "keeping inflation under control" is the chief priority for the next President.

Close behind as areas of major concern are "controlling federal spending," "restoring confidence in government" and "working for peace in the world," each singled out by 88% for major attention.

Far down the list are a series of issues that received much attention in the early primaries. Among them are "school busing to achieve racial balance," cited by only 38%, "legalized abortion," mentioned by 34% and "aid to cities," with 43%.

The top issues centered on the economy and the crisis of confidence in government:

— Close behind the concern about inflation and federal spending was "finding jobs for the unemployed," which was mentioned as a presidential priority by 85% of the people. "Not raising federal taxes" was a major concern to 81%.

— Along with "restoring confidence in government," 84% consider "restoring integrity in government" a high priority, while "restoring open government to Washington, D. C." is singled out by 74% for attention. It is obvious that the Watergate issue is high on the minds of voters in 1976.

— Peace and international security also are important public concerns. As always, "working for peace in the world" is a top priority for 88%, while "keeping U.S. military defenses strong" is believed to be very important in the view of 76% of the public. By contrast, only 37% give "foreign economic aid" top billing.

— Domestic violence also ranks relatively high among the public's worries, with 83% singling out "controlling crime" as a high priority. In addition, 78% express high concern over "controlling drug abuse" and 68% over "controlling violence at home."

— Quality-of-life issues also preoccupy the public. A substantial 68% would like to see major attention paid to "controlling air and water pollution"; 69% give a high priority to "aid to education"; 58%, to "federal health insurance"; 53% to "employment opportunities for minorities"; 58% to "enforcing standards for worker safety on the job." But only 42% cite "building more housing" as a major priority.

— 79% of the public also feel strongly that the next president should make "welfare reform" a high priority, while an even higher 85% express major concern with "maintaining Social Security on a sound basis." "Curbing business abuses" draws a substantial 75% response, while 66% give important billing to "giving business incentives to expand and open new jobs."

— The issue of "revenue-sharing with the states" was able to attract no more than 53% who gave it a high priority, while "aid to cities" drew an even lower 43%.

— "Federal gun control," another controversial area, is cited by only 52% as being of major importance. What's behind and at the bottom of the list of those matters that should be of the greatest concern to the next president are "school busing to achieve racial balance."

and "legalized abortion," which are mentioned by 38% and 34% respectively.

Recently, the Harris Survey asked a cross section of 1,512 adults nationwide:

Silver Convention Is Formula

The New York Times

New York — Silver Convention's new RCA album will appeal to those who liked the group's first, "Save Me," and who respond to this most scientifically disembodied of disco bands.

The back of the new disk boldly proclaims that "Silver Convention is Linda Thompson, Penny McLean and Ramona Wolf." But that's nonsense — any woman singer who could carry a tune could replace any of the three, at least on records.

What Silver Convention really is is a most ingenious formula — and the use of the word "formula" isn't necessarily a put-down since pop has always consisted of the clever invention and extension of danceably repetitious formulas. The ingredients in Silver Convention's success are the classic thumping disco bass (even more bold and bare than usual here), to which is added hypnotically reiterated doggerel, swooping, jerky massed-violin lines and occasional added gimmicks (e.g.,

The year 1959. Two subjects among others animate the television talk shows: artificial insemination and Europe whose birth (in the form of the Common Market) has been acknowledged by a treaty signed recently in Rome. Here are two rather playful subjects to inspire a fantasy based on a completely harebrained tale which invites us not to take it seriously. It is an invitation we

Silver Convention Is Formula

The New York Times

New York — Silver Convention's new RCA album will appeal to those who liked the group's first, "Save Me," and who respond to this most scientifically disembodied of disco bands.

The back of the new disk boldly proclaims that "Silver Convention is: Linda Thompson, Penny McLean and Ramona Wolf." But that's nonsense — any woman singer who could carry a tune could replace any of the three, at least on records.

What Silver Convention really is is a most ingenious formula — and the use of the word "formula" isn't necessarily a put-down, since pop has always consisted of the clever invention and extension of danceably repetitious formulas. The ingredients in Silver Convention's success are the classic thumping disco bass (even more bold and bare than usual here), to which is added hypnotically reiterated doggerel, swooping, jerky massed-violin lines and occasional added gimmicks (e.g., the by now rather overused orgasmic female cries and moans, which crop up here right on schedule on Side 2 in just as much of everything else).

It might all sound a little silly, and on one level it is. But it is fine dancing music, and curiously it becomes yet another sort of German art-rock (Silver Convention is based in Munich), just as appealing on its terms as Kraftwerk's "Autobahn" was on its.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

★ By SIDNEY OMARR ★

Friday, April 16, 1976

That Aquarian lady I know who writes letters to God but never mails them, is in a quandary. She asks questions at the rate of a machine gun spewing bullets, but the answers are few and far between. Aquarius, "our lady," is impatient, sincere, searching, demanding, carping, imploring. Where are the answers? Aquarius asks the eternal questions.

TAURUS (April 21-May 20): Accent on mystery, revelation, discovery, money as it affects partner or mate. Get thoughts, actions organized. Show that you can make things happen. Accept responsibility. Capricorn: Cancer individuals figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take new tack toward job basic issues. Welcome those who express creative ideas. Status quo could be on last legs. Know it and act accordingly. Leo: Aquarius could be a source. You will be "introduced to new roots."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Release of tensions indicated. You are able to create major changes, show off your individual style. Member of opposite sex is very much involved. One who teaches is able to communicate a valuable lesson. Be receptive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stick to basic course. Refuse to be lured by sparkle, brash, pose, dance. If you scatter your forces, you'll be giving up something of value for mere facade. Gemini: Sagittarius persons could be in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be aware of what's expected. Don't be surprised. Close neighbors relatives could be involved. Accent on facing issues, answering letters. You may reverse some views. That's all to the good — being perverted into specific pattern might not be practical or profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on change, which may be sudden or thought, action. You will obtain quality — and you'll be more appreciated by "special person." Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius might be in picture. Money situation requires examination. It will improve.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lungs, circulatory system, kidneys, bladder, liver. Get early start. Inciting stress, stress, independence of thought. Action. Trust judgment, timing, intuition. Wear bright colors. Don't take back seat or sell yourself short. Domestic adjustment is in store.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Element of intrigue is present. Someone is not telling you complete story. Backstage maneuvering is part of picture. Know it and protect your self in clinches. Take notes. Keep written records to verify future statements.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on desire, romance, reward, effects, public relations, dialogue with mate. Legal documents are in picture.

You may be asked to "let go." It might be a good idea to let go if losing proposal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Goal is in progress. Pay off obligations, responsibilities. You're asked to "do a favor." Be receptive but know when to draw the line. If you give away something for nothing, it will soon be resented.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be direct, confident, willing to face truths as it exists. Read, write, advertise, publish — open mind to communication. You are in picture. Make new start in program, which will better equip you to utilize assets.

IF APRIL 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, sensitive, direct, spiritual, introspective, psychic. You are learning how to discard the superfluous. October will be a good month if single; you may be asked to marry. May be "in love" — but very soon. Pisces. Virgo persons play important roles in your life. In May — next month — you travel, socialize, get rid of logistic burdens.

McAdoo Sparks Buffalo

From News Wires
Bob McAdoo scored 36 points and grabbed 21 rebounds Thursday to lead the Buffalo Braves to a 95-89 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in the opening game of the first round in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Braves, one of the NBA's highest scoring teams but not noted for defense, blanked Philadelphia's hot-shooting Fred Carter from the field and held George McGinnis to only one field goal in the final quarter. Carter wound up with 28 points and McGinnis 20.

The Braves, who lost the regular season series to Philadelphia 4-3, thus returned to Buffalo with a chance to win the best-of-three series in Friday night's second game.

Detroit 126, Milwaukee 123

Bob Lanier scored 35 points, 17 in the third period, and George Trapp came off the bench for a hot final quarter to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 126-123 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

In the final period of the tight game it was mostly the play of Trapp that kept Detroit on top. He scored 11 of his 13 points in the period and had a key block and rebound with 15 seconds left when a basket for Milwaukee would have put the Bucks within one point at 124-123.

The victory kept Detroit from elimination in the three-game opening playoff series. The deciding game will be played in Milwaukee on Sunday.

Cleveland 80, Washington 79

Bobby "Bingo" Smith hit a 25-foot jump shot with two seconds remaining to give the Cleveland Cavaliers an 80-79 win over the Washington Bullets and even their series at one game apiece.

The Bullets got their final points on a basket by Dave Bing to take a 79-74 lead. Jim Chones and Jim Clemons scored baskets for the Cavaliers at the 1:23 and 1:00 marks to make the score 79-78. Then the turnover began.

Washington three times forged three-point lead in the fourth period and once led by four until Bing's final basket gave the Caps their biggest lead, 79-74.

The best-of-seven series continues at Cleveland Saturday afternoon.

Phoenix 116, Seattle 111

The Phoenix Suns strung together five free throws in the last 19 seconds Thursday night to overcome an incredible fourth quarter performance by Seattle's Fred Brown and defeat the Sonics 116-111.

The win evened their best-of-seven NBA playoff series at one game each.

Brown, who finished with 45 points, riddled the Suns for 16 consecutive points and put the Sonics apparently out of reach at 107-101 with only 2:50 left. After a basket by Brown made it 109-105 with 1:26 to go, the Suns got back-to-back baskets from Tom Van Arsdale and Paul Westphal to even the count with 45 seconds left.

On Seattle's next series Brown passed out of bounds. With 19 seconds to play, Garfield Heard hit two free throws after being fouled by Willie Norwood. Brown dribbled the length of the court only to throw up an off-bounds shot that missed everything with 10 seconds remaining.

Denver 110, Kentucky 107

Guards Ralph Simpson and Chuck Williams scored 24 and 21 points, respectively, as the Denver Nuggets held off Kentucky 110-107 in the opening game of their American Basketball Association playoff series.

The second game of the best-of-seven semifinal series will be played here Saturday night.

Work Boosts Links To Win

Many track coaches must rely on numbers and depth to win big track meets.

Lincoln High coach George Ayoub says there's no substitute for hard work.

He's made his Links' girls believers of that philosophy after they won the Lincoln Public Schools track meet at East High's Stuart Stadium Thursday with the smallest roster in the city.

"We're definitely not long on numbers at Lincoln High," said first-year coach Ayoub. "But these kids really stick together as a team and that's what really helps in the end."

On the strength of sophomore Teresa Schoonover and juniors Robin Hruby and Tedy Bowling, the Links led the meet almost wire to wire and had the title clinched before the final two relays were even run.

With 63 points, the Links easily outdistanced Lincoln Relays champion Southeast at 50%.

"We've had three duals in a row since then (City Relays) and the girls were really ready for a big meet," Ayoub said. "They were anxious because they thought they had something to prove."

"I just told them before the meet that the rest of the city had to start thinking we could run here too," he added. "Girls track in Lincoln really has some fine performers."

Ayoub may have one of the finest around by the time she's a senior in Schoonover.

An all-around performer, Schoonover was the meet's only individual double winner with triumphs in the mile and 880 in respectable times of 5:47 and 2:37.9 over the wind-blown all-weather track.

She also placed second to Southeast's Cathy Schmidt in the 440 and third in the high jump with a 4-10 leap, four inches short of the record tying mark of 5-2 by East junior Joni Gray.

Gray's mark was the only record set although two marks were disallowed because of excessive winds.

Southwest sophomore Meg Gildersleeve sped to an :11.5 clocking that would have beaten a two-year old mark held by LSE's Doris Hitz in the 100.

Bowling and Lori Brydl both toured the 80-yard hurdles in :11.1, a mark that would have tied Peg Liddick's record set in 1974 and 1975.

Hruby came close to a discus mark with the second best throw by a prep girl this year at 12-10 1/4. Her effort fell short of Pam Koontz' 13-1 3 record set last year.

Schoonover's mile time will be counted as a record since it's the first year for the event in Nebraska high school girls track.

"Teresa runs with a lot of heart," Ayoub said of his promising sophomore. "She really gets worked up. I tell her to just keep it all inside her until after the race and she converts it to energy while she runs.

"But it all lets loose when the race ends," Ayoub said. "That's why she's always crying after she wins."

Before her high school career is over, Teresa may be doing a lot of crying.

Liddick Leads NU Romp

By DAVE SITTLER

Sporting a knot the size of a baseball on her knee, Peggy Liddick has living proof that the first year of college literally has its hard knocks.

A track star for three years at Lincoln Northeast, Liddick admitted Thursday afternoon that the adjustment to college athletics has been tougher than she anticipated.

"I've never worked harder in my life than I have since I came to Nebraska," said Liddick, after she helped lead the Cornhusker women to an 86-19 dual romp over UNO at the Ed Weir track. "I've worked 10 times harder this year and seem to have done 10 times worse."

Although she won the long jump and high hurdles, ran a leg on the winning 440-yard relay team and finished second in the 100-meter dash, Liddick was far from satisfied.

"This was just a bad day all around," she said as she nursed the swelling bulge on her knee which she acquired during the hurdle race. "I got off to a poor start in the hurdles, hit three of them and was lucky to win. And my long jump was terrible."

Her winning effort of 16-11 1/4 in the long jump was far below her personal best of 19-9 which she set while competing in high school.

"I've scratched a lot this year in the long jump," Liddick said. "But that's the story of my life in the long jump."

Noting that she thinks she's overtrained this season, Liddick said the pressure of having a scholarship and representing Nebraska has also taken its toll.

"Ask any of the girls on the squad who have scholarships," she said. "They will tell you there is a lot of pressure."

One of the first woman athletes to be awarded a scholarship, Liddick said she isn't complaining about the pressure situation she has suddenly been thrust in.

"Sure, high school track was a lot of fun and I miss some parts of it," she said. "But I'm not giving up because of the pressure. I love track. I wouldn't be out here if I didn't love it."

In addition to Liddick, Nebraska had three other double winners as coach Roger Capan's squad won all but two events against the Mavericks.

Pam Koontz, the Sunday Journal and Star high school girl athlete of the year last season, won the javelin and discus.

Pam Baker, a freshman from Omaha, raced to victory in the 100-meter and 220-yard dash, the minimum 21 for the seven-inning game. Each time the baserunner was Dean Carstens, who walked. Davis also fanned four Links.

Northeast scored in the first inning when Don Shelton doubled in both LNE runs.

Davis Rockets No-Hitter

Lincoln Northeast righthander Scott Davis, in his first varsity start for Lincoln Northeast, hurled a no-hit shutout Thursday and defeated Lincoln High, 2-0.

Davis, a 6-5, 180-pound senior, only allowed three baserunners while facing two batters above the minimum 21 for the seven-inning game. Each time the baserunner was Dean Carstens, who walked. Davis also fanned four Links.

"It was an especially outstanding performance for this early in the season," said surprised LNE coach Stub Seng.

Northeast scored in the first inning when Don Shelton doubled in both LNE runs.

Islanders Skate By Sabres, 5-3

From News Wires

Billy MacMillan and Billy Harris scored goals in a span of 35 seconds in the third period to break a tie and lift the New York Islanders to a 5-3 National Hockey League Stanley Cup quarter-final victory over the Buffalo Sabres.

The victory was New York's first ever over Buffalo at the Nassau Coliseum in the four years the Islanders have been in the NHL and cut the Sabres' series lead to 2-1 in the best-of-seven set.

The fourth game will be played here Saturday night.

With 11:04 gone in the third period, Trotter's 24-foot slap shot was stopped by goalie Gerry Desjardins, but the puck dribbled goalward and MacMillan shoved it into the net. Just 35 seconds later, Harris tallied his second goal.

Montreal 2, Chicago 1

Guy Lafleur, the league's leading scorer, hammered home a tie-breaking goal with 13 seconds to play to give the Montreal Canadiens a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks.

The victory gave Montreal a 3-0 in the best-of-7 series and the Canadiens can ditch it out with a win over the Hawks Sunday night.

The Black Hawks put very little pressure on Montreal goalie Ken Dryden, despite the fact that they had 19 shots on goal in the first two periods.

Los Angeles 6, Boston 4

The Los Angeles Kings defeated the Boston Bruins, 6-4, in their NHL playoffs and took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Toronto 5, Philadelphia 4

The Toronto Maple Leafs broke a three-year winless jinx against the Philadelphia Flyers with a 5-4 victory in a fight and penalty-marred third game of their series, which Philadelphia still leads 2-1.

Referee Dave Newell assessed a total of 42 penalties which included four game misconducts, while Philadelphia established a new team high of 28 penalties in a game.

Between fistfights and delays including a penalty box bout between Flyer Joe Watson and two police officers, some players concentrated on goal scoring. Leaf rookie Scott Garland opened at 8:27 of the first with Bobby Clarke responding for Philadelphia at the 12:00 mark.

Despite the fact it was the 11th annual University of Nebraska Wildlife Club awards banquet, it was a night of firsts Thursday in Lincoln's Legionnaire Club banquet hall.

It was the first time a club had been honored, a first time for Lincoln Dick Turpin to appear as guest speaker and a first time for Wildlife Club supervisor Howard L. Wiegers to capture the spotlight.

Wiegers, who has been involved in wildlife education for as long as anyone can remember, was honored Thursday as Nebraska's Mr. Wildlife Conservation by the Wildlife Club and the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star.

In addition, the poultry science department professor was notified that the annual Nebraska Outstanding Wildlife Conservationist Award, presented annually to the top individuals in the field, will hereby be known as the Howard L. Wiegers Award for Outstanding Conservation.

The first such award winner Thursday night was Malcolm's Bruce Kennedy. The former president of the Wachisca Audubon Society is actively involved with such organizations as the Save the Platte Committee and the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District.

Kennedy, a truck driver by trade, devotes much of his free time to upgrading the wildlife habitat on his own lands as well as those of others through his participation in organized programs. He owns 22 acres near Malcolm and leases another 40 with the majority of both set aside for wildlife habitat.

Wiegers, who helped organize the University of Nebraska Wildlife Club years back, was rendered nearly speechless by the surprise honor. Words of praise, however, came from such sources as Game and Parks

The first club award went to the Sandhills Rod and Gun Club of Ainsworth for its efforts in promoting outdoor recreation through many programs dealing with sportsmen-landowner relations.

Membership roles of the club have jumped from about 250 to over 600 in the past several months as it has involved the area landowners and sportsmen in joint efforts such as the restoration of two fishing ponds for public use, repair of mailboxes damaged in rural areas by vandals, conducting landowner polls for landowner-hunter suggestions and problem areas and work with the Game and Parks Commission on area programs.

As for Turpin, the humorous Game Commission hunter safety coordinator had some serious words intermixed in his "tummy tickling" stories.

He thanked the Wildlife Club for its assistance in the hunter safety program, then devoted a few words to the recently passed habitat bill.

"There have been some misconceptions floating around about this habitat bill," he said, noting fishermen don't have to purchase the $7.50 habitat stamp and almost all of the $2.7 million raised through the habitat bill increase will be directed toward habitat improvement rather than creating new jobs, buying new trucks or anything else.

The Bullets got their final points on a basket by Dave Bing to take a 79-74 lead. Jim Chones and Jim Clemons scored baskets for the Cavaliers at the 1:23 and 1:00 marks to make the score 79-78. Then the turnover derby began.

Washington three times forged three-point lead in the fourth period and once led by four until Bing's final basket gave the Caps their biggest lead, 79-74.

All-time home run king Hank Aaron of the Milwaukee Brewers said he wasn't upset or disappointed about not being listed on the all-star baseball ballot this year. Aaron has been selected for every All-Star game since 1955. "I shouldn't have been selected last year," Aaron said. "When you hit .220 or .230 or something like that, you shouldn't be expecting it."

Major league baseball broke an all-time opening day attendance record Thursday when a crowd of 52,613 turned out for the reopening of newly-renovated Yankee Stadium. The total for 23 home opening games jumped to 861,779, eclipsing the previous mark of 842,809 set in 1971. An estimated 30,000 are expected to witness the home opener of the five-time American League Western Division champion Oakland A's Saturday.

A municipal court trial was scheduled for Baltimore Orioles pitcher Ross Grimsley on a charge he intentionally threw a baseball into the Fenway Park stands last year, hitting a spectator.

Don McCune of Munster, Ind., moved into the lead in the Professional Bowlers Association's Tournament of Champions after the first eight-game block of semifinal play. McCune won four of his eight matches for a 7,184 total to hold a 25-pin lead over Billy Hardwick of Louisville, Ky., who vaulted from 17th to second.

Former Arizona State quarterback Danny White, the leading punter in the World Football League last year, signed with the Dallas Cowboys.

Poland's Wojtek Fibak scored the first major upset in the Monaco International Tennis Tournament when he eliminated Bjorn Borg, 7-6, 7-6, 6-4, in the quarterfinals.

Juri Novak scored two goals and Czechoslovakia jumped to a four-goal first-period lead in thrashing the United States 10-2 to remain unbeaten in the World Ice Hockey Championships.

Police said Thursday that Muhammad Ali would not appear for an exhibition bout Friday night as advertised. "It appears to be a large fraud on the community," said Maj. Charles W. Wren, assistant Chief of detectives in St. Louis. Wren made the statement after questioning Robert D. Blakes, who announced earlier this week that Ali would face three fighters including Jimmy Ellis, for three rounds each and began selling tickets to the event. Wren said he talked to Ali's attorney and business partner and both men said Ali would not appear in St. Louis and that Blakes had been arrested in Jackson, Miss., last January and in Memphis, Tenn., last month for selling tickets to similar events. About $2,000 in $10 and $25 tickets had been sold.

Tom Rongos, a legally blind former New York State Race Track ticket salesman will take his place among 2,200 participants in Monday's Boston Marathon, with a doctor and two nurses at his side to earn money for a foundation that hopes to find a cure for retinitis Pigmentosa, a disease that causes tunnel vision, the same malady that caused his two brothers to go blind.

Mark McVicker, a 6-7 basketball forward from Hastings, signed a letter of intent Thursday to attend the University of Nebraska.

As a senior, McVicker was named to the Sunday Journal and Star Superstate team. After leading his Hastings team to the first round of the Nebraska State High School basketball championship, he also won all-tournament team honors.

McVicker averaged 21 points and 13 rebounds per game this senior year, as well as shooting 57 percent from the field.

Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano described McVicker as a "tremendous prospect with unlimited potential."

"He had some outstanding prep years at Hastings," Cipriano said, "and is a proven basketball player."

McVicker joins 6-7 center-forward Stanley Jackson from Seminole (Okla.) Junior College and a Las Vegas native, who first signed a 1976-77 letter of intent with NU.

Recycling Center May Be Placed At Gere Branch Public Library

A new recycling center may be placed on the parking lot of the Gere Branch Public Library at 56th and Normal Blvd. pending an agreement between the Lincoln City Libraries and Lincoln Community Playhouse boards and the Citizens for Environmental Improvement, which is establishing the center.

At the Thursday afternoon meeting of the library board, John Robinson of the board's building and ground committee said a preliminary study has been done on the possible placement of the recycling center.

According to Robinson, the collection center hinges on a clause in the contract that would allow the two boards to terminate the agreement if there is a negative reaction to the center by area residents or if the collection trailer damages the asphalt parking lot.

He added the contract should also contain a provision making CEI responsible for repairing any possible damage to the parking lot surface.

If an agreement can be reached, the center should be open before the board's May meeting.

In other business the library board approved the placement of public telephones on various library sites.

However, the board stipulated that the telephones be located so that they can be conveniently used by library patrons, but not in an area that would attract people to the library vicinity late at night.

Charge In Fatal Crash Dismissed

Omaha (AP) — District Court Judge Samuel Caniglia has dismissed a motor vehicle homicide charge against Jerry Lee Hughbanks 29 of Omaha.

Deputy County Atty James Jansen said Caniglia dismissed the misdemeanor charge after finding evidence in the case insufficient.

Hughbanks was charged in the death of Barbara Junick, 29, of Omaha, a passenger in his auto which struck a parked car Jan. 26.

Hughbanks said actions of the driver of another car brought about the accident, and added that the other auto left the scene. It never was found.

Leave It To States
Washington (UPI) — Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said the issue of motorcycle safety should be left to the states.

Lushton Suffers Damage In Storm

Severe weather returned to eastern Nebraska Thursday night, causing extensive damage in the southwestern York County town of Lushton.

A twister ripped off the front porch of the Tommy Arndt home in Lushton, and damaged the mobile home of Mike Balaban.

Gran bins were toppled at the Kroeker Elevator in Lushton.

Five grain bins and the garage were damaged at the R. A. Hoffmann place at Lushton.

The storm knocked out power lines at Lushton, leaving the town minus electricity. This was one of the south central Nebraska communities without power after the severe March 29 wind and ice storm.

High winds and heavy thunderstorms rolled across a wide area of eastern Nebraska Thursday night, from Grand Island to the Missouri River.

In Lincoln the brief heavy rain was accompanied by strong winds. At the Lincoln Airport, rainfall measured only .10 of an inch, but was heavier in other parts of the city.

The thunderstorms were spawned by a slow moving cold front extending southward through central Nebraska from a low in eastern South Dakota, according to the National Weather Service.

Fire Kills 7 Children In Sweden

Stockholm, Sweden (UPI) — A flash fire apparently caused by a child playing with matches engulfed a seaside beach house early Thursday, killing eight mentally retarded children.

Fire investigators said the blaze, which razed the wooden house in only a few minutes, started in a foam rubber mattress in one of the rooms occupied by the children.

"One of the children could have been playing with matches, but we are not sure yet," one fire official said.

Police Inspector Lennart Adamsson said, "The fire spread so fast that the whole building burned down in a few minutes." He said seven other retarded children and five warders escaped.

The house, used as a temporary home for the children since January while their own institution underwent repairs, was located only about 50 yards from the sea and 18 miles south of the west coast port city of Goteborg.

All the victims were between 9 and 18 years of age.

"I woke up at around 5 a.m., but thought it was too early to get up," said off-duty warden Lill Ahlyvist. "Just as I was ready to go back to sleep I heard the children. They were running in the corridor screaming 'It's burning, It's burning!'

Bertil Hederin, who lives near by, said, "It was horrible. Terrible. I saw firemen carrying charred corpses away from the flames while the house was collapsing."

Fire Chief Tore Olsson said when his units arrived at the scene flames were shooting from all windows and the roof of the house.

"We were told there were still kids in the rooms, but we had no chance to save anyone," he said. "After several hours we managed to bring the fire under control, but by that time the house had collapsed."

Sakharovs Are Beaten By Soviets

Moscow (UPI) — Soviet police in Siberia Thursday arrested and beat Nobel Peace laureate Andrei D. Sakharov and his wife Yelena. Mrs. Sakharov told friends in Moscow by telephone

A friend of the couple said Mrs. Sakharov telephoned from Omsk, Siberia, and said she and her husband, attending the trial of Tatar dissident Mustafa Djemilev, were beaten after being detained for the second straight day.

"Yesterday they held us for four hours," Mrs. Sakharov told the friend. "Today it was less, but they beat us."

Sakharov is 54, his wife 53.

No other details were available and there was no mention of injuries, but Mrs. Sakharov said they expected to be back in Moscow Friday, indicating there was nothing serious.

Sources in Omsk said Djemilev was found guilty of slandering the Soviet state and sentenced to two and a half years in a strict-regime labor camp.

When the Djemilev trial opened Wednesday, the Sakharovs were reportedly involved in a clash with the police over entry to the courtroom. The Tass news agency said both Sakharov and his wife struck policemen, were arrested, and later released.

According to the friend, Mrs. Sakharov said there was another disturbance Thursday when police refused to let Djemilev's brother and sister into the court.

Djemilev, 31, a writer, has long campaigned for the return of the Tatars to their Crimean homeland from which they were deported in 1944 by Josef Stalin, accused of collaborating with the Nazis.

In a Moscow trial on similar charges, human rights campaigner Andrei N. Tverdokhlebov was given a light sentence of two years internal exile — a five-year term minus three years to compensate for the 12 months he has spent in prison since his arrest.

Valentin Turchin, a cofounder with Tverdokhlebov of Moscow's chapter of the human rights organization Amnesty International said, "The only reason for this is the public pressure which has been brought on the Soviet authorities."

"The paradox of the situation," Turchin said, "is that though he was arrested for nothing, imprisoned for nothing and now is being exiled for nothing, we are still happy because he did not get more."

Fire Kills 7 Children In Sweden

Stockholm, Sweden (UPI) — A flash fire apparently caused by a child playing with matches engulfed a seaside beach house early Thursday, killing eight mentally retarded children.

Fire investigators said the blaze, which razed the wooden house in only a few minutes, started in a foam rubber mattress in one of the rooms occupied by the children.

"One of the children could have been playing with matches, but we are not sure yet," one fire official said.

Police Inspector Lennart Adamsson said, "The fire spread so fast that the whole building burned down in a few minutes." He said seven other retarded children and five warders escaped.

The house, used as a temporary home for the children since January while their own institution underwent repairs, was located only about 50 yards from the sea and 18 miles south of the west coast port city of Göteborg.

All the victims were between 9 and 18 years of age.

"I woke up at around 5 a.m., but thought it was too early to get up," said off-duty warden Lill Ahlgren. "Just as I was ready to go back to sleep I heard the children. They were running in the corridor screaming 'It's burning, It's burning.'"

Bertil Hederin, who lives nearby, said, "It was horrible. Terrible. I saw firemen carrying charred corpses away from the flames while the house was collapsing."

Fire Chief Tore Olsson said when his units arrived at the scene flames were shooting from all windows and the roof of the house.

"We were told there were still kids in the rooms, but we had no chance to save anyone," he said. "After several hours we managed to bring the fire under control, but by that time the house had collapsed."

Sakharovs Are Beaten By Soviets

Moscow (UPI) — Soviet police in Siberia Thursday arrested and beat Nobel Peace laureate Andrei D. Sakharov and his wife Yelena. Mrs. Sakharov told friends in Moscow by telephone.

A friend of the couple said Mrs. Sakharov telephoned from Omsk, Siberia, and said she and her husband, attending the trial of Tatar dissident Mustafa Djemilev, were beaten after being detained for the second straight day.

"Yesterday they held us for four hours," Mrs. Sakharov told the friend. "Today it was less, but they beat us."

Sakharov is 54, his wife 53.

No other details were available and there was no mention of injuries, but Mrs. Sakharov said they expected to be back in Moscow Friday, indicating there was nothing serious.

Sources in Omsk said Djemilev was found guilty of slandering the Soviet state and sentenced to two and a half years in a strict-regime labor camp.

When the Djemilev trial opened Wednesday, the Sakharovs were reportedly involved in a clash with the police over entry to the courtroom. The Tass news agency said both Sakharov and his wife struck policemen, were arrested, and later released.

According to the friend, Mrs. Sakharov said there was another disturbance Thursday when police refused to let Djemilev's brother and sister into the court.

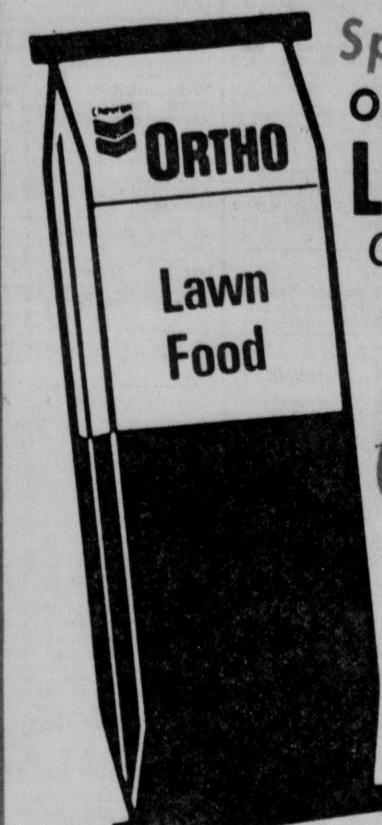

Djemilev, 31, a writer, has long campaigned for the return of the Tatars to their Crimean homeland from which they were deported in 1944 by Josef Stalin, accused of collaborating with the Nazis.

In a Moscow trial on similar charges, human rights campaigner Andrei N. Tverdokhlebov was given a light sentence of two years internal exile — a five-year term minus three years to compensate for the 12 months he has spent in prison since his arrest.

Valentin Turchin, a cofounder with Tverdokhlebov of Moscow's chapter of the human rights organization Amnesty International, said, "The only reason for this is the public pressure which has been brought on the Soviet authorities."

"The parody of the situation," Turchin said, "is that though he was arrested for nothing, imprisoned for nothing and now is being exiled for nothing, we are still happy because he did not get more."
